Hopson Reveals He Put Pressure On Newspapers

Congress Members Also Approached

Appears in Senate After Truce Ends Row Over Witness.

By Felix Bruner.

Howard C. Hopson, utilities magnate, wanted for a month as a witness by the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee, appeared suddenly before that committee at 5:30 p. m. yesterday and began recital of an amazing story of attempts to influence members of Congress, newspapers and "prominent men" against the utilities holding company bill.

With a threat of punishment for contempt of the Senate hanging over him, Hopson appeared almost as mysteriously as he had disappeared several times before. Chairman Black of the investigating committee said a lawyer for Hopson called him and told him the utilities man, who is reputed to control the Associated Gas and Electric System, was ready to appear at any time. Black said the committee was ready to hear him at once and hastily called a meeting.

Contempt proceedings in the Senate against Hopson and his lawyer, W. A. Hill, of Boston were held in abeyance with indications that they would not be pressed. Chairman O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee, which has been examining Hopson, introduced a resolution providing for his arrest "to protect him from the Senate," but did not ask for its passage. The resolution also provided that Hopson should be available to the Senate committee when the House committee was through with him.

Destroyed Messages.

Almost immediately after he appeared before the Senate Committee Hopson was confronted with copies of scores of telegrams, most of them signed "Duncan." He admitted authorship of most of them, explaining that they were signed with the first name of his secretary, Duncan Robertson. The messages had to do with the campaign against the utilities bill.

Hopson, with his famous smile missing and answering questions in a husky voice, said that he had destroyed all "interoffice" messages concerning the utilities campaign. He was evidently taken by surprise by the fact that the information was in the hands of the committee, but he said:

"I heard a few days ago that you had subpenaed all the telegrams in the United States."

Several times he told the committee:

"You have me on the hip."

He said if he had known the committee would obtain copies of the messages from the telegraph companies he would have retained copies of his own.

Served in New York.

Hopson, in answer to questions, said a House subpena had been served on him last Friday by a man named Birmingham, reputedly a New York private detective, and that Birmingham had stayed with him since. He said that last Monday night, the night before his first appearance before the House committee, he was in Alexandria, Va. He said the subpena had been served in New York.

The witness declared that he had no recollection of receiving a telegraphic request to appear before the Senate Committee. He said he was in Florida and "telegrams are never relayed to me anywhere." He said that while the committees were looking for him he spent several days at the Shoreham Hotel, registered as Thomas McCarthy, the name of his chauffeur.

Hopson revealed that last night when Chesley Jurney, sergeant at arms of the Senate, was making an intensive search for him, seeking to serve the contempt citation, he was at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Black constantly referred to the sheaf of telegrams as he questioned Hopson. He started with attempts of Hopson and his associates to influence newspapers. The witness

New Deal Dollar Bill Subtly Aids Roosevelt

By the United Press.

A New Deal dollar bill, subtly advertising the Roosevelt Administration, is in the making. The presses are grinding out 600,000,000 copies of the bill, each with this Rooseveltian motto in Latin prominently displayed:

"Novus ordo seclorum."

That means "A new order of the ages." It appears on the reverse of the great seal of the United States, but never was used on the Nation's currency until a New Dealer spotted it.

A. W. Hall, director of the Bureau of Engraving, said Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., suggested use of both sides of the seal. The reverse side of the seal carries another motto, "Annuit Cooptis," meaning "God favored our undertakings."

McIntyre Seen In Lobbyist's Room in Hotel

As Senate attaches Wednesday night were desperately hunting high and low for Howard C. Hopson, public utilities magnate, Marvin H. McIntyre, assistant secretary to President Roosevelt, was lolling in the hotel suite of Bernard B. Robinson, lobbyist for Associated Gas & Electric System, controlled by the missing man, it was revealed yesterday.

Along with McIntyre in the Robinson suite was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury L. W. (Chip) Robert and Amon Carter, Texas newspaper publisher and a frequent White House visitor.

The presence of the two officials of the Administration, which has been in a sharp struggle with the public utilities, was disclosed when Senate Sergeant-at-arms Chesley W. Jurney decided to take a look in Robinson's room at the Shoreham Hotel for the missing Hopson.

Robinson, more than a week ago, sent congressional investigators hot on Hopson's trail when he calmly informed the House lobby committee he had talked with Hopson at the Shoreham the night previously. At that time both House and Senate committees were seeking Hopson to subpena him.

Accompanied by half a dozen newspapermen, the rotund Jurney rapped on the door of the Robinson suite. The door was opened, but instead of seeing Hopson the callers were amazed to see McIntyre, Robert and Carter.

Immediately, so it was reported, Carter became angry and made threats against anyone who should write any account of the incident. Finally the Texas publisher cooled down and changed his tactics, suggested that the group go below in the hotel, have refreshments and forget about it, it was further reported.

McIntyre, when asked about his presence in Robinson's room, dictated the following statement:

"I was invited to dinner at the Shoreham Hotel by L. W. Robert, jr., Assistant Secretary of the

Catholics Are Assailed by Streicher; Police Guard Streets.

By the United Press.

Berlin, Aug. 15.—Julius Streicher's call for a new campaign to drive the Jews out of Berlin was followed tonight by violent anti-Semitic demonstrations.

A Brown Shirt Storm Trooper rushed from the Jew-baiters Sportspalast mass meeting, kicked in the windows of a Jewish sweetshop across the street and exclaimed:

"You dirty swine. You tore Der Stuermer from your windows."

(Der Stuermer is the Jew-baiting newspaper published by Streicher. Anti-Semitic demonstrators paste it on windows of Jewish shops and houses.)

Crowds, leaving the meeting at which Streicher, in his first Berlin appearance since early Nazi days, attacked Jews and Catholic bishops, gathered in large numbers, intent on anti-Semitic demonstrations.

"Where there is a Jew let us get him," was the battle cry of throngs inflamed by Streicher's call for an all-Aryan Germany.

Troops Disperse Crowd.

As they drifted away from the Sportspalast they chorused:

"Germany awake; perish the Jews."

Police reinforcements were summoned to police the Kurfuerstendamm—Berlin's Broadway. Others guarded lesser streets, conspicuously deserted by Jews who had been warned by their leaders to remain indoors.

Streicher criticized Catholic bishops for their conception of mixed marriages.

"When a Catholic wants to marry a Protestant the bishops talk mixed marriage," he said.

"But when a Negro with a Catholic certificate of baptism wants to marry a white Catholic woman, that is not mixed marriage in the views of the bishops.

"After nine months what do we have in the basket?

"Here is a child with every stigma of darky blood. There a smiling, rosy German baby with no mark of religion whatever.

"The time is coming when a Jew with a Catholic certificate of baptism will not be permitted to marry in Germany. Although as yet there is no law to erase race pollution, thank God we have judges who send men to the penitentiary for defiling the proud German race."

Streicher raged for 2 hours and 25 minutes against Jews and Catholics for seeking Jewish converts.

Charges Race Pollution.

"Here in Germany every once in a while a Jew and a renegade German woman are paraded through the streets wearing a placard branding their crime of race pollution," he shouted in one of his major outbursts.

"The people must be made conscious of this danger.

"In America a Negro is lynched almost every week for attempting to rape a white woman. We in Germany say it serves him right."

All of the Jew-baiter's attacks on his enemies were cheered enthusiastically by thousands offering to aid in the new anti-Jewish drive.

Commenting on foreign reports of the recent Kurfuerstendamm anti-Semitic demonstrations, which described them as "pogroms," Streicher demanded:

"Has a single Jew been shot?"

Streicher, publisher of Der Stuer-

Mrs. Fall Will Fight to Save Ranch From Doheny Company

By the Associated Press.

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 15.—Mrs. Albert B. Fall, graying wife of the former Secretary of the Interior, strode militantly today into Tres Ritos ranch eviction proceedings instituted through a company headed by their old friend, E. L. Doheny.

"I'll hire the best lawyer in New Mexico to save our home," she said, supplementing a declaration of defiance from Fall, who is ill at the ranch. "I'm going to file a suit myself and I'm not going to wait for somebody to move us out."

At Los Angeles, R. M. Sands, vice president of the Doheny-controlled Petroleum Securities Co., said Doheny was "thoroughly conversant" with an order to Fall to vacate the 750,000-acre ranch at Three Rivers, N. Mex., by today.

"If Mr. Fall insists on remaining," Sands said, "we are prepared to take the matter into the courts."

Sands said the friendship of Fall and Doheny, once fellow prospectors, "has not been changed." He declared sale of the property under foreclosure is "being handled entirely by myself as a business matter of the company."

The Tres Ritos Cattle Co., a New Mexico corporation, probably will take over the ranch in a week, he added.

Mrs. Fall said "we're not going to take this lying down."

"I've been fighting for 12 years—this isn't the time to give up."

She referred briefly to the conviction of Fall on a charge of accepting a bribe from Doheny in the naval oil reserve case, for which he was sentenced to a year in prison and $100,000 fine.

"Mr. Fall has two more things he wants to get done—to regain his citizenship rights, of which he was wrongfully deprived, and to save the Three Rivers home for his family.

"He has been too ill to do either.

"I went to see the President about getting Mr. Fall's citizenship restored, but of course I didn't get an audience. I saw an Assistant Attorney General.

"When the ranch property was foreclosed in 1929, I signed the deed under protest, and I didn't do that until I was promised by the lawyers that we would keep the home, and that if the ranch was ever sold we would get everything above what Mr. Doheny was out. That's all he wanted—the money he was out of pocket."

Mrs. Fall disclosed that she has been the family's sole support since the Fall fortunes turned downward. She is operating a Spanish cafe in El Paso and a merchantile business at Three Rivers.

THE CIRCUS LOT

Action Is Everything.

EARL SHIPLEY came skipping out the dressing tent, flopping his clown's feet, stopped, scratched his wigged head, and said, "Hell's bells, I've got part of my last gag all mixed up with part of my first gag. The heat's getting me" . . . The boss of the circus cops, tough, muscular, tobacco-chewing, stopped twirling his nightstick and said, "Yeah, it's hot all right, but it's better than the rain in Baltimore and that was better than the mud in Scranton" . . . "Zo?" said a slim German acrobat, glistening with sweat, "Anyding iss bedder dan Sgrandon, no?" . . . They all laughed.

It was in the back yard of the Hagenbeck-Wallace, etc., circus. All around were clowns and horses, pretty girls, husky men, bareback

A merciless sun beat down upon them all, starting beads through the thick make-up of the clowns . . . In the shade of a dressing tent a pretty French girl, who carries scars from the bears she wrestled with in a previous animal act, sat knitting a sweater . . . Beyond two slim, lovely ballet girls, not more than 19, were hanging out flimsy clothes to dry . . . Over the mingled odor of the circus came a stronger odor of food cooking for dinner at 3:30 . . .

Suddenly all seemed to be at attension . . . Horses appeared prancing from nowhere, bedecked and Everything seemed confused, But watching, one soon saw that there was no confusion . . . A vast human machine was at work. On went those in the first spec'; waiting were those for the next. It was as if someone were turning a crank, and, with every turn, some actors went on and others came off . . . Nobody seemed to be timing it, nobody giving directions . . .

The backyard cop strolled up and down swinging his night stick, but he was not there to keep order among those whose world this was; he was there to keep away the outside world . . . Rudynoff, who is the son of a circus horse trainer and who was born in a trunk, came riding up in a cleared space, on a high spirited horse. He was practising his act. Soon he would go on, and with him would go his wife, who has a wooden leg (she was hurt in a circus accident) riding like the veteran she is . . .

In the dressing room intelligent loking men were slapping on their faces making them over into ridiculous clowns . . . In mufti you'd never know they would soon be floating through the air with greatest of ease, or making faces at children . . . One clown sat repairing the battery that would flash light on his bulbous nose during his cuckoo act . . . It was the same way in the mess tent. There was the Christiana family all at supper—papa, mama, and all the little Christianas . . . They might be at supper in the kitchen of a Brooklyn flat, chattering away . . . That little shaver, in a few years, will ride a horse as well as his biggest brother or prettiest sister . . . In another tent a radio blared the ball game to a silent crowd. In the distance was the hum of three generators which light the circus . . . It came here at 5 in the morning, by midnight tomorrow it will be gone . . .

Rome Wants Subjugation Of Ethiopia

Duce's Envoy Demands Right to Occupy African Foe.

Deadlocked With British Spokesman on Eve of 3-Power Parley.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 15.—Baron Pompeo Aloisi, head of the Italian delegation to the tri-power conference opening tomorrow, informed the British representative, Anthony Eden, tonight that Italy's minimum demand for peaceful settlement of her dispute with Ethiopia was occupation of Ethiopia by the Italian army.

Aloisi said Premier Mussolini would require this condition in order to provide for the enforcement of economic privileges.

Italy, he said, would not be able to accept the British plan for economic concessions in Ethiopia unless Italy could make Ethiopia respect them. This, he said, would mean Italy must keep armed forces in the East African country.

Aloisi was induced to call on Eden, it was learned, by Premier Pierre Laval after the Italian had refused to visit the British diplomat separately on the eve of the scheduled conference between delegates of the French, Italian and British governments.

Deadlock Unbroken.

After the meeting it was said in informed quarters their positions were as "irreconcilable" as before the meeting.

Laval, convinced that peace in Africa and the political stability of Europe depend upon his efforts to get Britain and Italy to agree, talked with both Eden and Baron Aloisi. But he found their views still widely divergent.

Laval heard Aloisi reaffirm Benito Mussolini's determination to have some sort of political control over Ethiopia.

After one talk Eden returned again to the Quay d'Orsay late in the afternoon and stressed that Britain is only prepared to consent to Italy's economic penetration of the African empire—not to a political penetration.

Open Parley Today.

The three—Laval, Eden and Aloisi—will formally open the conversations tomorrow. They will revolve around the tri-power treaty of 1906 by which Ethiopia was divided into spheres of economic influence, and England, France and Italy pledged themselves to protect the integrity of Ethiopia.

Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, whose stand as to what should be done with his country has been rarely mentioned, had a chance to present his side to Laval through Tecla Hawariat, his Minister from Ethiopia. Hawariat saw Laval shortly before Laval's second talk with Eden.

Nicholas Politis, who is expected to be officially appointed as a fifth arbitrator on the dispute, also conferred with Laval.

Arguments presented to Laval by Aloisi for Italy's program included: Italy must protect its African colonies against a "wild and dangerous nation (Ethiopia) by disarming it; Italy must expand its colonies as Great Britain and France have done; Italy is sorely in need of raw materials and must develop her own supplies.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 15.—Official London watched the tri-power discussions on the Ethiopian problem in Paris today with much uneasiness.

Efforts were made to counteract the feeling in Italy that Britain is using battering-ram tactics to prevent a war. Informed quarters denied Italian reports London would threaten to withdraw from European affairs in the event of an Italo-Ethiopian war.

The government is keeping the question of an arms-export ban on Ethiopia to one side until it sees the outcome at Paris. There are many hints the ban will be raised in the event of failure of the conference.

Gets Cool Reception.

Britons regarded with mixed feelings Lloyd George's open declaration yesterday against the national government. The World War premier said what electors do in the forthcoming election "may decide the fate of civilization and humanity."

His speech, in which he charged Britain, France and Italy had wrecked the power of the League and were preparing to turn Ethiopia over to Italy, received a somewhat cold reception in the press.

Lloyd George's speech to the National Trades Union Congress, which was editorially characterized as a "declaration of war," indicated his vigor is unsapped after more than 40 years of dogged political fighting.

The Telegraph lightly dismissed his attack on the national government's attitude toward the League of Nations, asserting:

"To charge the present government, which has labored unceasingly to maintain and strengthen the League of Nations, with 'letting the League down' is to be wilfully blind to facts within the knowledge of all hearers."

The Welshman announced he was opening his "new deal" campaign at Plymouth September 7. His ac-

Silver Nationalization Is Repealed; U.S. Bonds to Be Taxed.

Borah Proposal Has Close Call

Conference Demanded Today as Session's End Is Seen.

By Robert C. Albright.

Laden with last-minute amendments removing tax exemption from new Federal security issues and repealing nationalization of silver and the 50 per cent profits tax on dealings in the white metal, the Administration's $250,000,000 wealth-taxing bill was passed by the Senate in record time last night by a 57 to 22 vote.

Hastily accepting a half-dozen zero hour proposals, in a drive to speed passage and hasten adjournment, Finance Chairman Pat Harrison smashed through a storm of threatening debate to force a vote on the bill after only two days' consideration.

The President's bill, carrying its burden of unwanted amendments, but with every recommendation of the Senate Finance Committee approved intact, was returned to the House, where a conference will be demanded today.

Borah Amendment.

An amendment reaching the vast pool of future Federal security issues was offered just before passage by Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho. Harrison, who had accepted the silver amendment and minor changes in the tariff and excise laws, balked at this one.

A roll call was demanded and the amendment was approved by the narrow margin of 40 to 39. Twenty Democrats voted with 18 Republicans, 1 Farmer-Laborite and 1 Progressive for the Borah proposal, while 38 Democrats and 1 Republican, Senator Warren R. Austin, of Vermont, opposed it.

In line with the President's proposal to remove tax exemption from all securities, Federal, State and local, the Borah plan still does not go as far as Mr. Roosevelt wants to go through a constitutional amendment. Borah's amendment reaches only future Federal issues, leaving the great volume of State and municipal securities untouched.

Treasury Opposes.

Despite the President's stand against all issues of tax-exempt securities, the Treasury is expected strongly to oppose the Borah project, since it handicaps Federal issues while leaving new State and municipal securities tax-free. Slapping both normal levies and surtaxes on interest from new Federal issues, officials said, would place the Treasury at a particular disadvantage, in view of new financing and refunding operations running into the billions in the next few months. The Borah amendment, it was contended, would increase the cost of most Government borrowings.

The Idaho independent Republican explained State and local issues can only be reached by a constitutional change, which he does not believe the States will ratify. Congress has authority to tax or not to tax future Government security issues.

Bonus Proves Dud.

A bonus bombshell threatened to disrupt the proceedings just before passage of the bill, but it ended in a dud. Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, offered the inflationary Patman bonus bill as a rider. Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson hastily explained the bonus will be considered just as soon next session as the Finance Committee can report out a bill.

That was all Thomas wanted. He had previously received such informal assurances from Robinson, but he wanted it stated for the "record," he said. The Oklahoman withdrew the proposed "rider," but

300 Farmers Rout Marshal And Halt Sale

Beatings Given Several Men by Missouri Mob in Foreclosure Riot.

By the United Press.

Plattsburg, Mo., Aug. 15.—Farmers, who stood in ranks like soldiers today blocked an attempt of the Federal Government to conduct a farm foreclosure sale and severely beat United States Marshal Henry B. Dillingham, his aids and bystanders.

Leaders of the troop of some 300 husky men challenged Dillingham to come to Gallatin, Mo., tomorrow to conduct another scheduled farm sale and promised to block it.

The troop was identified as the Farmers Protective Association. The same group blocked several farm foreclosure sales during the worst of the depression.

Today's demonstration was believed to mark the first time that a Federal action has been disturbed.

Dillingham and his aids—George Colburn, bailiff; E. E. Fisher, bailiff; and Robert Pulliam, deputy marshal—were released after four hours of captivity and warned to take no further part in farm sales.

Dillingham was acting as special master for the Federal court of Judge Merril E. Otis, sitting at St. Joseph, Mo. The foreclosure order was awarded the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, Dillingham said.

The troop leaders threatened to break up scheduled sales at Gallatin, Maysville and Marysville next week. Only half a dozen mob members were residents of Clinton County, of which Plattsburg is the county seat. Several of the others were recognized as residents of the northeastern part of the State.

The mob arrived at 8 a. m. In a long parade of automobiles, men in overalls drew up in double ranks like soldiers. On four sides of the courthouse, platoons stood on guard or relieved each other for meals and rest.

The sale of the Sam Divelbiss farm, near Hemple, which was scheduled for sometime between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m., was to begin with

AAA to Battle Writs on Tax As Bill Passes

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

As House and Senate yesterday reconciled their differences over the AAA amendments and sent the measure to President Roosevelt for his signature, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings revealed the Government would proceed to have dissolved 509 temporary injunctions preventing the Treasury from collecting processing taxes.

Issuance of temporary injunctions by Federal courts throughout the country has seriously diminished Treasury collections of processing taxes. So far this month revenue from AAA processing taxes amounts to less than one-fourth of the sum collected in the same period last year.

The legislation, finally approved late yesterday by Congress, validates the processing taxes imposed by the Secretary of Agriculture and specifies such taxes for the future.

The legislation also was designed to meet other objections raised in the courts against the original agricultural adjustment act, declared unconstitutional by the Circuit Court of Appeals at Boston.

The Attorney General disclosed that as soon as the revised AAA legislation becomes law through the President's approval he would instruct United States district attorneys to move for a dissolution of the temporary injunctions which have been issued against the collection of processing taxes.

Altogether 1,112 cases affecting the AAA and the processing taxes are pending in the Federal courts. Most of these seek to restrain the Government from collecting the processing taxes on cotton, meats and other agricultural products. So far 509 temporary injunctions have been issued. The majority of the cases were instituted since the Boston Court of Appeals declared the AAA act invalid.

The Boston case will be carried to the Supreme Court by the Government. Neither it nor any case

Heat Here Prostrates Five; Hope for Relief Today Slight

Slight hope that the heat wave would be broken in the next 24 hours was given sweltering Washingtonians last night by the Weather Bureau.

Today, these officials said, will be hot and partly cloudy with the "possibility of a shower" in the afternoon.

Temperatures, which had mounted to 92 at 2:45 p. m., overcame five persons in the District and the excessive humidity of .51 caused general suffering.

Marguerite Steele, 25, of the 300 block of Maryland avenue northeast, collapsed as she got off a street car at Third and D streets northeast. She was taken to Casualty Hospital suffering from a heat stroke and hysteria.

Overcome as he worked in the rear of the 3300 block of M street northwest, William C. Smith, 30, of the 900 block of K street northwest, was taken to Georgetown Hospital and later to his residence.

Long Will Run If Roosevelt's Foe Is Hoover

Plans to Be Independent Candidate in '36 'Unless a Liberal Is Named.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 15.—Senator Huey P. Long announced today he would be an independent candidate for the Presidency in 1936 "if the Republicans go Hoover, the Democrats go Roosevelt and there is no other liberal candidate."

"If some liberal candidate would be chosen by either party," the Senator said, "I would support him. But it begins to look like the G. O. P. is being dominated by Mr. Hoover or someone of his calling.

'Need a Liberal."

"The liberal and progressive element is called upon to decide that we don't want a Hoover, that we know what is, or a Roosevelt, that we don't know what is."

Waving his arms vigorously, and turning his forensic ability on full blast, Senator Long added:

"We need a liberal candidate to give equal distribution to everybody in this land of plenty."

The Senator—who has been campaigning for months on a "share-the-wealth" program—mentioned four Senate colleagues whom he classified as liberals, he would like to see nominated in '36 for the Presidency.

Four Senators Named.

They are the Independent Republicans William E. Borah, of Idaho; George W. Norris, of Nebraska, and Arthur Capper, of Kansas, and the Democrat, Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, who was the running-mate of "Old Bob" La Follette on the third party ticket in 1924.

If someone of this type would be nominated by either party," Long continued, "I would prefer to support him before becoming a candidate myself.

"But if such a person is not chosen, and before supporting Hoover or Roosevelt—those twin bed mates of disaster—I would become a candidate myself on an independent ticket."

Long emphasized that his chief purpose in announcing willingness to become President was to stir both parties into action and to consider liberal candidates.

"I want to scare them," he said, but again declared that if necessary he himself would accept the presidential candidacy.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Midwestern Republican leaders, several of them planning conferences with former President Herbert Hoover tomorrow, tonight cheered Senator Huey Long's announcement of his 1936 Presidential plans.

Long's Statement.

Other prominent Chicago members of the party intimated they would have no regrets if the Louisiana Democrat carried out his proclaimed intention.

In New York today, Long asserted, "if the Republicans go Hoover, the Democrats go Roosevelt, and there is no other liberal candidate," he would run independently for the Presidency next year.

"The more of those fellows we get running the better it will be for the Republicans," said Silas H. Strawn, a former president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

"We will welcome Huey Long as an assistant Republican," said Jacob D. Allen, one of the leaders in the June Grass Root conference at Springfield, Ill.

"If the 'chief' should run, that should not hurt him," said a close friend of Mr. Hoover, who declined to allow use of his name.

All Republican sources continued discreet about the meetings with Midwest counselors of the party Mr. Hoover was reported to have arranged for tomorrow.

Arrives Today.

He will arrive here from New York, where he met several Eastern Republicans of note, tomorrow morning.

"He is scheduled to stop here only between trains and will continue on to California late Friday," said Arch W. Shaw, frequently Mr. Hoover's host. Shaw was with the former Chief Executive last Sunday when he drafted his demand that the Roosevelt Administration disclose before Congress adjourns what constitutional changes it desires.

"That statement did not necessarily imply that Mr. Hoover was a candidate for renomination," said a close associate here. "It could have represented only his personal reaction as a private citizen to the Washington situation."

Thomas Lashes The 'Collapse' Of Silver Policy

Charges Treasury Efforts to Raise Prices Were Half-Hearted.

The Government's silver policy has collapsed, Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, charged yesterday, pointing out that the market price has dropped for the third successive day despite substantial Government purchases.

Thomas' statement came after he conferred with Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., who announced Wednesday night that the Government had purchased 25,500,000 ounces that day in London and New York. He contended that the Treasury's policy has fallen short of the goal of silverites—to raise the price of silver until a silver dollar is worth $1.

"There is no use buying a lot of silver if we are just going to use it as token money," Thomas said. "As far as I can judge the Government's silver policy as understood by the people has collapsed.

"The Government takes the position that its duty is merely to purchase enough silver to bring the national reserves of the metal to one-third the gold reserves. It apparently intends to do that as cheaply as possible. The recent decline in the market reflects that attitude."

Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, introduced a resolution yesterday for a special investigation of the effects of the silver purchase act of 1934, under which the Treasury has been operating. Thomas said this apparently was an attempt to head off an investigation he was going to propose. He indicated a belief that Pittman's proposed investigation would not be thorough enough.

Father, 80, Slashes Son, Says He's Glad He Did It

Detroit, Aug. 15 (AP).—Angered because his suit to compel his son to support him was dismissed by Probate Judge Thomas C. Murphy, John S. Schram, 80, slashed his son several times with a knife in the corridor of the county building today.

The son, Robert G. Schram, 49, was rescued by spectators.

"When the suit was thrown out of court I got so mad I didn't know what I was doing," Schram told police. "But I don't care, I'd rather go to prison than to the poorhouse, anyway."

Italian Flood Dead Now Placed at 200

Ovada, Italy, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Officials today confirmed estimates of 200 dead in the floods which swept the fertile Piedmont region this week.

Damage totaled 60,000,000 lire ($4,950,000), including destruction of 200 houses, 7 schools, 6 churches, 4 large bridges, 2 electric power stations and communications throughout the inundated area.

Scientist's Mother Dies.

Metal Still Slumping

New York, Aug. 15.—A disturbed international silver market again held Wall Street's attention today as international speculators continued to sell "stale" long holdings in London.

The New York price for imported bar silver was reduced here for the third successive time to 65⅜ cents an ounce, the lowest since April 10. The decline today was three-eighths of a cent, and the total drop since Monday is 2⅜ cents.

Reports from Washington and London revealed that the United States Treasury was continuing its buying of metal in the British market, but had failed to stem the downward trend. The London price for bar metal was reduced three-sixteenths of a penny to the equivalent of 65.09 cents.

Banking quarters felt that the magnitude of United States purchases, with the consequent necessity of exchanging dollars for pounds sterling, fully accounted for the current advance of British currency to a new high. Far Eastern silver currencies rallied after sharp declines earlier in the week.

U. S. Buying Heavily

By the United Press.

London, Aug. 15.—Financial experts today pointed to large shipments of silver being made to the United States as confirmation of the fact that the United States Treasury Department had been a heavy buyer of the metal in the London market within the last few days.

Southampton reported that the liner Washington left for New York with 10,000 silver bars valued at about $5,530,575.

Runaway Farm Youth Is Believed Drowned

Merrill, Wis., Aug. 15 (AP).—Authorities searched today for Edward Crass, 17-year-old farm youth living near Skanawan Lake, who disappeared from his home two hours before he was to undergo an operation for appendicitis.

A note left for his father said he would never be taken to the hospital alive and threatened suicide by drowning.

Albanian Army Chief Slain by Journalist

Rome, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Gen. Giljardi, inspector of the Albanian army, was assassinated during an abortive revolutionary outbreak at Fieri, the newspaper Vatra reported at Tirana today.

Belgrade dispatches said that Giljardi and his chauffeur were killed by shots fired by H. Tscherezi, Albanian journalist. He was released recently under a political amnesty after serving half of a three-year penitentiary sentence.

Senate Passes Amended Bill To Tax Wealth

The vote on passage of the amended tax bill varied only slightly from the 55-to-19 ballot by which the Senate on Wednesday refused to send the measure back to the committee. The 57 to 22 final count tallied 48 Democrats, 7 Republicans, 1 Progressive and 1 Farmer-Laborite in support of the Administration's tax program. Voting "No" were 10 Democrats and 12 Republicans.

Silver Rider Surprise.

Harrison's acceptance of the silver rider amendment offered at the eleventh hour by Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, came as a complete surprise, since the change is opposed by the Administration and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

Observers said the acceptance was merely an expedient to prevent a long floor controversy, and predicted the amendment will be discarded in conference. Suspecting this, Senator Thomas, Senate silver leader, served notice of a fight when the bill returns from conference if the silver amendment is rejected.

McCarran said he offered the proposal to promote "a free and open silver market" in this country. He declared the threat of nationalizing silver, and the 50 per cent tax imposed on silver profits, have damaged the domestic industry by driving most silver transactions abroad.

In the unexpected event it survives the House and Senate tax conference, the proviso would open silver again to free domestic trading and speculation in silver. The McCarran move was interpreted as another step by the silver bloc to boost silver prices and ultimately remonetize silver.

May Adjourn Tuesday.

The rapid-fire wind-up of the Senate's tax controversy opens the way for an adjournment of Congress early next week, even at the expense of sacrificing, for this session anyway, such Administration measures as the Guffey coal regulation bill and the Wheeler-Rayburn utilities holding company measure.

President Roosevelt left Washington last night for Hyde Park, but it is understood he will return to the White House Sunday evening, when a conference of congressional leaders will be called. Adjournment, of course, will be the subject discussed.

LaFollette Beaten.

The unbroken march toward passage of the tax bill followed crushing defeat of three separate efforts by Senator Robert M. LaFollette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, to reach into the lower income brackets with new taxes.

LaFollette's first schedule, starting new surtax rates on incomes over $3,000, was rejected by a 62-to-19 vote. This was the amendment that originally was adopted by the finance committee, but later thrown out of the committee bill. LaFollette tried again, this time with an amendment starting surtaxes at over $4,000. This was defeated, 56 to 22. Once more LaFollette came back with his amendment lowering income tax exemptions to $800 for single persons and to $2,000 for married. This was turned aside by a voice vote.

Last-minute amendments attached to the bill when Harrison stated he had no serious objections, provide:

Reduction in the tax on petroleum at wells and refineries from 1-10 of a cent a barrel to 1-25 of a cent a barrel. Senator Thomas P. Gore (Democrat), Oklahoma, who offered the amendment, said the tax was not originally imposed as a revenue measure, but as a method of gaining entry to books in the search for "hot oil," and that the tax he proposed would serve this purpose.

Finance Bill Intact.

Elimination of the 3-cent-a-pound tariff on whale and sperm oil. Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, who submitted the amendment, said the tariff amounted to a "virtual embargo," and actually operated to retard domestic exports of lard.

Prohibition of any Federal tax on insurance taken out specifically for the purpose of paying death duties, such as levies on estates and inheritances. This was sponsored by Senator Augustine Lonergan (Democrat), Connecticut.

Wealth-taxing provisions written by the Finance Committee were adopted virtually without change, and the House inheritance tax schedules, which the Senate committee junked, were not even offered in the Senate.

Only one committee amendment went to a roll call vote—the proposed surtax step-ups on incomes of more than $1,000,000. This was approved, 49 to 21. Three Republicans—McNary, of Oregon; Davis, of Pennsylvania, and Carey, of Wyoming—voted with 46 Democrats for the amendment, while 11 Democrats, 15 Republicans, 1 Progressive and 1 Farmer-Laborite shouted "No."

Present Bonds Exempt.

The Borah amendment to the tax bill, subjecting interest on future Federal security issues to both normal and surtaxes, will not touch the great volume of Government bonds outstanding, now tax exempt in this respect. They totaled $12,838,000,000 on last June 30, an increase of $3,000,000,000 over those outstanding at the end of 1933. It is estimated that the volume of tax-exempt bonds of various kinds has risen to the unprecedented aggregate of $33,000,000,000.

Although there is serious legal doubt whether the Government has the legal right to tax such issues retroactively and to reach into the pool of State and local issues without a constitutional change, it has been suggested in many quarters that the President advocate the step taken yesterday by Borah as a move toward his ultimate goal. Treasury exigencies of financing the tremendous Federal deficit, however, are expected to prevail against it.

McCarran Amendment.

The McCarran silver amendment approved by the Senate had the three-fold objective of repealing Treasury licensing of silver imports and exports, withdrawing the right to nationalize all silver held within the United States, and removing the 50 per cent tax on profits from domestic silver transactions.

McCarran asserted these three sections "serve as a barrier to reaching the objectives set forth in the silver purchase act."

He declared the restrictions had destroyed New York as the leading silver market of the world, transferred to London the business and profits of Americans dealing in silver and diverted to foreigners the business of melting and refining silver coins and bullion of low content which ultimately finds its way to the Treasury.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 15.—One of the city's largest hotels has barred the German swastika, it became known tonight, as a precaution against possible riots.

The Association of German-American Technologists, a conservative national organization, announced it had canceled plans to hold its fifty-first annual convention at the Hotel New Yorker because of the hotel's refusal to permit display of the German flag. The convention was scheduled instead for the Hotel Astor from August 31 to September 2.

Holding Mayor F. H. La Guardia indirectly responsible for the edict, Rudolf Wildermann, president of the association, said: "When Mayor La Guardia starts interpreting international treaties it naturally gives other people, including Ralph Hitz (president of the hotel), the idea that they can interpret the laws to suit themselves."

He referred to the mayor's recent contention that the Nazi government had violated the reciprocal trade treaty of 1925 by discriminating against Jewish-Americans.

Expressing regret at "complications" that had arisen from its refusal to permit display of the German flag, the hotel management said:

"This decision was made entirely without prejudice as to race or nationality, but simply as a precautionary measure to preserve the property of the hotel and insure the safety of our guests.

"It is well known that display of this flag on a number of recent occasions in New York incited riots and major disturbances and it is our anxiety to avoid a recurrence of these that brought about the decision we made in the matter."

Terming the hotel's fear of disorders "a huge joke," Wildermann said his organization's membership included "plenty of Jews."

Asserting it was expected that the German Ambassador and the consul general would address the 2,000 to 3,000 delegates, Wildermann contended that any civic organization would display the swastika as a matter of course when those dignitaries were present.

Wildermann said he had taken the matter up with the consul general.

First Degree Charge Sought in Seigh Killing

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—A first-degree murder indictment will be sought against Mrs. Etta Reisman, District Attorney Charles P. Sullivan said today, for the fatal shooting of 23-year-old Virginia Seigh in a love triangle.

The girl, secretary to Mrs. Reisman's husband, Arthur Reisman, middle-aged and prosperous proprietor of a chain of beauty shops, was shot and killed yesterday as Reisman drove her to his home in Beechhurst to declare his love and ask for a separation from his wife.

It was understood that the defense would probably be one of justifiable homicide due to emotional insanity caused by unhappy circumstances a few hours prior to the shooting.

Suitor Kills Sweetheart, Rival and Then Self

Detroit, Aug. 15 (AP).—Police blamed the eternal triangle today for a double slaying and suicide. The victims were Irene Miller, 25-year-old telephone operator; Sidney Lipkin, 28, and Lipkin's 37-year-old rival for the young woman's affections, Philip R. Ritchie, a plumber.

A note written by Ritchie before the tragedy disclosed, police said, that he shot his attractive red-haired former sweetheart and a rival suitor because of jealousy. As the two lay dying in the young woman's home, Ritchie walked into an adjoining room and ended his own life.

Military Court Acquits Private in Shooting

Nevada, Mo., Aug. 15 (AP).—A military court of 14 officers acquitted Private Ray Bixler, 19, Missouri National Guardsman, of a manslaughter charge in the fatal shooting of Miss Harriet Hasty, 40, of Paragould, Ark., last March 21.

Bixler testified his rifle was discharged accidentally as he started to lift it and fire into the air as the car in which Miss Hasty was riding sped past him at 50 or 60 miles an hour as he was doing flood-patrol duty on Roaring River.

Max West, driver of the car, testified he was driving about 25 miles an hour and did not know he was being ordered to stop.

mer, leading Jew-baiting newspaper, ridiculed reports that 3,000 Jews had been killed in anti-Semitic demonstrations at Nuremberg.

Describing Jews, Streicher said, at a zoo he saw groups of German children admiring little birds and lambs. "But Jewish children did not stop at these cages," he said. "They went straight to the beasts of prey. Why did they do that, my hearers? Because it was their blood urge—blood calls for blood."

With his arrival, Jewish leaders warned their people to remain indoors throughout the night.

Drowning Victim's Body Is Recovered

Girl's Death an Accident, Coroner's Jury Holds.

The body of Miss Marie Kidwell, 19, of 617 Sixth street northwest, was recovered after being in Chesapeake Bay since last Sunday. Miss Kidwell drowned when she stumbled over a rope on a fishing boat and fell overboard off Holland Point, 30 miles south of Annapolis.

Her body was discovered yesterday by Lieut. William S. Pye, United States Navy, who was flying a patrol seaplane from the Naval Academy. He brought his ship down and notified watermen who were searching from boats. Capt. Harry Manifold, of Deale, Md., sighted the body just as Lieut. Pye appeared overhead and brought it ashore.

A coroner's jury convened by Police Magistrate Harry F. Barnes, of Shady Side, returned a certificate of accidental drowning.

When Miss Kidwell fell into the waters of the bay last Sunday she sank before the owner of the fishing boat, Louis Olasson, his brother, Milton, and others in the party, could reach her. The entire group was from Washington.

400-Lb. Man Free Of Check Charges

Police Court Jury Says He Made a Mistake.

The jury was confronted by a weighty problem. But an acquittal verdict was returned in Police court, freeing William A. Coleman, 400-pound Pennsylvania coal operator, from worthless check charges.

Coleman is a big man. The courtroom is small. The witness stand is smaller for a man like Coleman. Coleman couldn't squeeze in, so he sat in a chair in front of the jury during his trial.

All went well until the chair collapsed. Another was found. It held until testimony was completed.

Coleman was accused of passing worthless checks totaling $500. It developed, however, that he was mistaken about his bank balance and when the management of a local hotel complained, he gave his automobile and as much cash as he could raise in settlement.

A.F. of L. Chiefs Back Williams In Union Feud

Council at Atlantic City Votes Approval of Recent Convention.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 15.—The bitter feud between rival groups of building trades unions for control of the American Federation of Labor's building trades department will break out anew at the federation's October convention here.

This became certain today with the federation executive council's approval of a recent department convention which elected J. W. Williams of the Carpenter's Union, as president. The council also directed William Green, president, however, to try to reconcile the two groups.

Leaders of the faction headed by M. J. McDonough, who also calls himself president of the department, privately expressed their opinion, however, that peace efforts would be useless.

Each of the two departments plans a departmental convention here October 2, just before the federation convention. McDonough expects to present credentials to the federation convention as delegate from the "American Federation of Labor building trades department." He expects to be rejected but to carry the fight to the credentials committee and later to the convention floor.

Green said he had learned from Secretary of Labor Perkins that appointment of the new National Labor Relations Board probably would be announced at the White House shortly.

That board is to administer the Wagner labor disputes act to guarantee labor's right to organize and bargain collectively.

Union employes in textiles, steel, rubber, automobiles, slaughterhouses and aluminum, Green said, were ready to go before the new board with petitions for elections to determine whether the unions were the workers' representative for collective bargaining. A number of complaints against companies, charging discrimination against union men, also would be presented, Green said.

By the Associated Press.

Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 15.—Four hundred employes of the Terre Haute Malleable and Manufacturing Co. went on strike today in the face of martial law edict that forbid picketing or assemblage.

Prof. R. Clyde White, of Indiana University, sent here as a special mediator by the Department of Labor, met tonight with union leaders and said he believed the dispute can be settled speedily.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Aug. 15.—Union painters turned down WPA jobs in Cincinnati today, but opposition to this class of employment eased elsewhere in Ohio.

"We're not going to let the Government beat down union wage scales," contended E. C. Bundy, business agent of the painters' union, as he called his men from jobs on Cincinnati schools, announced plans for picket lines and strike banners, and declared those who work will be looked upon as strikebreakers.

In Zanesville, however, L. S. Gibson, WPA director, reported all but 42 WPA workers at their jobs, though the Unemployed League there picketed some projects.

In Williams County, H. M. Brannan, county relief director, asserted that many unemployed had refused offers of jobs at 50 cents a day in the harvest fields around Bryan. He replied to a group of 100 which protested that relief given was inadequate that he had but $1,500 for 164 cases of direct relief this month. They telegraphed to Columbus asking for more funds.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 15 (AP).—State Health Director Walter H. Hartung appealed today to Federal authorities for funds to wipe out obnoxious odors caused by decaying corn in recently flooded areas of eastern Ohio.

Bergdoll Offers 2 New Terms For Surrender

Fugitive Draft Dodger in Germany Wants Army's Jurisdiction Barred.

By the Associated Press.

Weinsberg, Germany, Aug. 15.—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, millionaire American draft dodger, made a new offer of surrender today to the United States Government.

His stipulations are that "first the case be taken out of the hands of the military authorities and, secondly, my family be permitted to reside permanently in the United States."

Anxiety over the neglected American education of his German-born children prompted the offer, Bergdoll said.

Bergdoll wrote the following statement for the Associated Press:

"Some time ago my wife (now in America) received a very sympathetic letter from the White House which stated she should first carry her pardon pleas to the War Department and the Department of Justice and then if both refuse her pleas, she should make her final plea to the President as he is the last resort in such matters.

"I have just received a letter from my wife, which stated that both the War and Justice Departments have refused clemency. It is now up to President Roosevelt to make a final decision in the matter. In this connection I hereby make this new offer:

"I will surrender to the Federal authorities in Philadelphia and plead guilty to draft evasion (which involves a penalty of one year in prison and $10,000 fine), providing, first, that the court-martial findings be voided in my case and taken out of the hands of the military department; secondly, that my family be permitted to reside permanently in the United States.

"The chief reason why I make this offer is because of the fact that I would like to send my children to school in September. Their education has been sadly neglected to date because I had always felt that Roosevelt would pardon me and I could send them to school in America, but the years have passed by so quickly things have reached a stage where something must be done real soon.

"Therefore I make the above offer and would greatly appreciate your informing me by wire whether it is accepted or not. I will leave on the first boat sailing for America."

By the Associated Press.

The complaint alleged a telegram was sent to Senator James F. Byrnes by the power company asking, "For my best personal interest please eradicate Rayburn-Wheeler bill," and that it was signed, "Fred Turnipseed."

Turnipseed further set forth that postal regulations forbade participation by employes in politics and that sending the message placed his job in jeopardy and caused him "great mental anguish and loss of sleep."

Britain Renews Effort for Naval Parley in 1935

Date Still Uncertain and London Denies Session Already Called.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 15.—The British government renewed its efforts today to arrange a naval conference in 1935 under provisions of the expiring Washington and London treaties, it was learned.

The date was said to be "still as uncertain as ever." Officals denied reports from Tokyo that the British government had issued invitations for a five-power conference here in October.

When the Anglo-Japanese-American conversations last fall were adjourned here it was left for Britain to take the initiative in calling further conversations or a conference. In accordance with this plan London invited France, Italy and Russia to send delegations here for preliminary discussions.

These talks have not been held, but the French are expected in September. The uncertainty is due largely to the Ethiopian dispute.

200 Club Members Hear Rep. Brewster

Adjournment of Congress by next week was predicted last night by Representative Ralph Brewster, of Maine, in addressing 200 members of the Washington Kiwanis Club and their guests at a dinner at Camp Bennett, children's summer health camp near Brookville, Md.

Representative Brewster said Howard C. Hopson, utilities executive, and the holding company bill are all that is keeping Congressmen away from home. Brewster's charges of Administration lobbying on holding company legislation was one of the leading factors in opening lobby investigations several weeks ago.

Mrs. John Bennett told the Kiwanians the history of the camp's growth from its two-child capacity in 1915 to the present establishment, with accommodations for 600. Sarah Evans, assistant camp director, sang a group of songs. Harold N. Marsh, club president, acted as toastmaster.

Fifty Kiwanians who were unable to make the trip to the camp, attended a round-table luncheon in the Mayflower Hotel.

Extension of the Washington Highlands-Anacostia bus line to the Naval Research Laboratory and Blue Plains was asked for in a petition signed by 700 persons presented to the Public Utilities Commission yesterday by William A. Roberts, people's counsel.

The extension could be made as an experiment, he said. If patronage warranted, the extension could be continued.

By the United Press.

Moscow, Aug. 15.—President Roosevelt and his New Deal regime were hailed as "bulwarks against fascism" by Red leaders addressing the Seventh World Congress of the Comintern (Third Internationale) tonight.

George Dimitrov, Bulgarian Communist active in Germany before the famous Reichstag fire trial, suggested the American Reds should support Mr. Roosevelt.

"Some Communist groups consider Mr. Roosevelt as a leader among Fascists," Dimitrov said. "But it must be pointed out that he is opposed now by the financial circles which are the most substantial supporters of the trend to the right."

Earl Browder, secretary of the American Communist Party, told the congress the major problem of the Communist Party in the United States is to create a united trades union movement with the support of organized labor.

He stressed the importance of solidarity among all supporters of socialist principles.

Friendly Gesture

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Aug. 25.—An article on the Ethiopian situation in Premier Mussolini's newspaper Popolo D'Italia was surprisingly friendly to England today on the eve of the tri-power conference in Paris.

It said Italy turned to Ethiopia for expansion in order not to hurt England and France in their colonial possessions.

Practically all of Africa is held by England and France, it was pointed out.

The article was written by Gaetano Polverelli, former head of the government press bureau.

By the United Press.

London, Aug. 15.—An Ethiopian railway policeman, one of the force guarding the French railroad from Djibouti to Addis Ababa, struck Count Justi, Italian vice consul at Djibouti, at the Diredawa Station today, the Exchange Telegraph Agency reported from Djibouti.

The policeman allegedly struck the vice consul because he and his servants were loading baggage through a car window, a practice forbidden in Ethiopia. A scuffle followed a heated argument.

Fight by Youth In '36 Planned On Pendergast

Missouri Political Boss Says He'll Kill NYM Movement in '38.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 15.—A dapper, wavy-haired young man announced plans tonight to rally the youth of Missouri for a fight on one of the Nation's most powerful political bosses.

"The way to beat Tom Pendergast's Democratic machine in Kansas City is to elect a Governor of Missouri who will guarantee honest elections here—and Missouri elects next year," said Joseph C. Fennelly, sales manager for a paint company.

So Fennelly, president of the National Youth Movement organization, is going to form clubs "in every city of the State." At present the NYM is confined to Kansas City. It won two of the city's eight council seats at a 1934 election marred by five slayings.

"We have some big things in mind which we will disclose this fall to prevent the election of another Governor like the present one, Guy B. Park, a mere tool of Pendergast," Fennelly said as he sat in his office, nattily clad in sport attire.

"We are going to have a Statewide set-up ready for the primaries next year. It's the big push. If we are unable to elect a Governor who will stop vote padding and thug tactics here, then there is no use fighting Pendergast any longer."

The NYM will not decide for some time the candidates it will support next year. The organization is designed to attract young persons of all political faiths.

To assure a nucleus of "constantly active workers," wide appointive powers have been vested in a committee of three. Officers who do not give sufficient time can be replaced quickly.

"Boss Tom" Pendergast predicted recently that the NYM would be smashed in the next city election, in 1938. He said it would have been in 1934 but for factional fights in the Democratic organization.

"That's only half the truth," Fennelly said tonight. "But why argue? We'll see who was right soon enough."

Job Report Stirs Kansas

Topeka, Kans., Aug. 15 (AP).—Two affidavits alleging that bolting Young Democrats of Kansas were offering political jobs, abbetted by Republicans, to induce more desertions, caused a political furore tonight in Kansas.

Robert Campbell, president of the Young Democrats of Kansas, said the promise of jobs involved the office of the Governor, Alf M. Landon, mentioned as a possible Republican candidate for President.

Heated denials followed quickly.

In the affidavits, made public by Campbell at Wichita, Kans., Charles Marshall and Dale W. Maxwell, two members of the University of Kansas Young Democratic organization, said they were offered good jobs if they would bolt.

Four Die as Plane Crashes in Texas

Ship Falls in Cotton Field After Landing Attempt.

F. A. Ivy, Birmingham, Ala. passenger.

Guy Weldon, a farmer, said he heard the roar of the motor and looked up to see the plane drop several flares. It circled over the level cotton patch as if to land, and then crashed at about a 20-degree angle with a loud explosion.

Mooney Witness Can't Recall Details Preceding Bombings

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 15.—John MacDonald, 63-year-old partly paralyzed man upon whom part of Tom Mooney's hope for freedom is based, testified today he does not now recall what happened in the week after the San Francisco bombings, for which Mooney is serving life in prison.

Earlier, MacDonald, testifying at his hospital here before a special referee of the California Supreme Court, had given a detailed account of his activities during that week. He had said that during it much of his damaging testimony against Mooney at the latter's trial in 1917 had been "framed" by prosecuting officials in San Francisco.

His account of his activities during the week was given on direct examinatoin by counsel for Mooney. It was on cross-examination that Deputy Attorney General Cleary, of California, wrung from the witness a statement that he did not now recall his actions during the significant week.

Cleary retorted:

"I don't know what MacDonald remembers, but I do believe that after the ten years in which he has been worked on by Mooney sympathizers that he really does not know what happened."

Under questioning, MacDonald admitted that shortly before the Mooney trial, red pepper was thrown in his eyes in San Francisco, that he had received threatening letters and that the owner of the hotel in which he was staying also had received a threatening letter.

Mdivani's Kin Deny Conference on Estate

Paris, Aug. 15 (AP).—Princes David and Serge Mdivani, arrived today from the United States, denied knowledge of a family conference for the division of the estate of their late brother, Alexis, and then left for Barcelona.

Their former sister-in-law, the Countess Barbara Hutton Mdivani von Haugwitz-Reventlow, who is stopping at a hotel opposite the one where the Mdivanis checked in, said she was not in on any conference.

"I haven't been invited and I shan't be represented by a lawyer," she said. "I think the natural thing for Alex to have done would be to leave everything to his family."

Alexis was killed in an automobile wreck in Spain August 1.

Three Judges Order AAA Taxes Be Paid

All Gained Bench After Roosevelt Took Office.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Aug. 15.—The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals today denied the plea of three State of Washington milling companies for a restraining order to prevent collection of AAA processing taxes.

The decision means the Fisher, Centennial and Ritzville flour mills must pay the internal revenue collector wheat processing taxes as directed by the Federal District Court at Tacoma.

Due to the absence of Presiding Justice Curtis D. Wilbur, who is on vacation, the case was heard today by three judges who have come to the bench since President Roosevelt took office—Francis Garrecht, Lifton Matthews and William Denman.

MAYOR A. D. H. FOSSEY.

Mayor of Miami Is Indicted Again

4 Others Named in New Tax Fraud Charges.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Aug. 15.—The second indictment within two days was returned today against Mayor A. D. H. Fossey, charging that he and three past and present city commissioners conspired with a tax certificate buyer to defraud the city.

Charged jointly with Mayor Fossey in the new indictment were Commissioners Orville Rigby and E. G. Sewell, a former mayor; C. H. Reeder, real estate broker, and the tax buyer, Victor J. Tatham.

Tatham was under prior indictment by the present grand jury for perjury as a result of his testimony during the prolonged investigation of alleged deals in Miami City tax certificates.

Fossey was indicted yesterday for allegedly counseling two real estate brokers, Herman Wall and Herman Jesse, in what the grand jury charged was a fraudulent certificate transfer.

Today's indictment is based upon alleged acquisence in Tatham's proposal to use tax certificates in acquiring a Negro park site for the city.

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., Aug. 15.—Funeral services for Clarence Whealton, attorney and member of the House of Delegates, will be conducted from the Whealton home here tomorrow afternoon. Interment will be in Parsons Cemetery.

Whealton was found dead yesterday in a garage in the rear of his office building. Isaak Messick, a city employe, told a coroner's jury today he was attracted to the garage by the sound of a motor running.

The attorney, he said, was lying on the front seat of the car.

Dr. Jesse R. Wanner told the jury it was his belief Whealton died of carbon monoxide poisoning. He said he examined the body at the request of State's Attorney Rex A. Taylor.

The jury returned a verdict that Whealton came to his death "as the result of inhalation of monoxide gas."

Action Is Completed On O'Mahoney Bill

By the Associated Press.

Congressional action was completed yesterday on the O'Mahoney bill which provides for issuance of leases for oil and gas prospecting on the public domain.

The measure, which now goes to the White House, would substitute the leases for a long-established permit system.

A royalty of not less than 12½ per cent is fixed by the bill. Returns would be divided, with 52½ per cent going to the reclamation funds, 37½ per cent to the State in which the lands are situated and 10 per cent to the general treasury.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 15 (AP).—Complete returns from Tuesday's election showed Ohio voters generally sanctioned bond issues for poorly conditioned public schools. Proposals to issue bonds for new buildings and to provide additional operating funds were defeated.

A tabulation of bond issues for school purposes showed that 22 of the approximately 30 proposed issues were approved. The approvals were granted mostly in the rural areas, while in the urban centers they were rejected.

Politics Block To Holding Bill, Says Alabaman

Failure to Agree Laid to Party Interference by Huddleston.

By the Associated Press.

An assertion that "political factors" were interfering with a conference agreement on the public utilities holding company bill was made yesterday by Representative Huddleston (Democrat), Alabama, in the face of a new Senate effort at conciliation.

"If political factors were out of the way we would get along," the Alabaman said to reporters as the second day passed without a meeting of the Senate and House Conference Committee.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, head of the Senate Conference Committeemen, has asserted that failure to get a bill would give President Roosevelt "an issue" against public utility interests.

Wheeler declined yesterday to comment on reports of a compromise proposal designed to dull the ax aimed at holding companies in the Senate measure. He said, however, that a renewed effort at agreement would be made at a meeting today.

The Senate bill called for dissolution of all but one holding company in each regionally integrated system. The projected compromise was reported to permit two holding companies to each regional system. The House bill had left to the discretion of the Securities and Exchange Commission what holding companies should be dissolved "in the public interest."

Another point in the suggested compromise was to eliminate the section requiring dissolution of "unnecessary" holding companies within seven years and to permit SEC to require their dissolution "in a reasonable time."

Huddleston declined to comment on it. He insisted, however, in spite of Senator Wheeler's evident discouragement, that it was possible to get a bill out this session.

"With section 11 (the dissolution clause) out, the bill is still a drastic, regulatory measure," Huddleston said, "and should be approved."

Novice Sleuth Hunted in Ohio As Bride Killer

Lorain Police Use His Own Fingerprints; Jersey Murder Revealed.

By the Associated Press.

Lorain, Ohio, Aug. 15.—Police searched tonight for Joseph Meluch, 26, amateur detective, wanted on a first-degree murder charge for the slaying of his six-week bride, Dorothy, 21.

Police Chief Theodore Walker said copies of fingerprints which Meluch made of his own hands in a detective correspondence course were forwarded to police in Buffalo, N. Y.; Reading, Pa., and Olive Pa., where Meluch formerly lived.

Meluch left his father's home, where he and his youthful wife occupied a room several hours before his brother, Paul, 13, discovered Dorothy's body last night. Her skull was crushed, the body on the floor beside the bed.

Miss Margaret Meluch, 22, Joseph's sister, told police that the couple "seemed to be crazy about each other."

Margaret told Capt. Riley that she found no instrument her brother could have used in the slaying. She added that he "might have done it with the butt of his revolver." The gun was missing.

Meluch married Dorothy Flowers, a graduate of State College High School, State College, Pa., at Fort Dearborn, Mich., July 1. The fugitive's father said the girl lived there with her mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Kline.

U. S. Now Spending 29 Millions Daily

By the Associated Press.

The Government has poured out cash since July 1 at a $10,000,000,000-a-year rate.

If continued, the Treasury would spend by next June 30 $2,000,000,000 in excess of budget estimates.

At close of business August 13 the Treasury reported expenditures of $1,002,196,741. This was at the rate of $29,500,000 each day since July 1.

The President's January budget message estimated $8,520,000,000 would be spent for all purposes during the year, or at the rate of $23,300,000 every 24 hours.

Mutilation Case Hinted

By the Associated Press.

Mount Holly, N. J., Aug. 15.—A shallow grave in the pine woods near Chatsworth yielded the body of an unidentified man who, authorities tentatively believe, was the victim of a mutilation operation.

The condition of the body, stripped of clothing and sprinkled with quicklime, prevented county detectives from determining definitely that the man had been mutilated. An autopsy was ordered.

Life Sentences Given 4 Slayers Of Dickinson

Schweitzer, Three Women Composed as Judge Reads Verdict.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Aug. 15.—Life sentences were imposed today upon William Lee Schweitzer and the three beer garden entertainers who were his accomplices in the 1934 hold-up murder of Howard Carter Dickinson.

The courtroom in which the trial dragged through three weeks was jammed with spectators as Judge John A. Boyne sentenced Schweitzer to life at hard labor in Marquette Branch Prison.

Florence Jackson, her sister Loretta, and Jean Miller will serve their terms in the Detroit House of Correction.

The three women, who screamed hysterically Tuesday when the jury convicted them of luring the New York attorney to his death in Rouge Park here the night of June 26, stood with bowed heads as sentence was pronounced.

Their attorneys had announced they planned to appeal, but no motions were filed today.

"I sentence you, whatever your name may be, to spend the rest of your natural life at hard labor," the court said to Schweitzer, "and I hope no pardon board will ever release you."

The 26-year-old ringleader in the slaying plot has a record of nine arrests, probation records show, each under a different name. He muttered something as he heard the sentence, and immediately was led away.

Guffey Coal Bill To Be Argued In House Today

Rules Committee Allows Consideration on Floor for First Time.

By the Associated Press.

The way was smoothed yesterday for the controversial Guffey coal stabilization bill to get its first consideration in a hall of Congress.

The House Rules Committee dropped its fight over the custody of H. C. Hopson, utilities executive, long enough to listen to advocates and opponents of the bill and then approve a special resolution. Under it the measure will be called up today and remain the pending business until a final vote. Eight hours of debate were allowed.

Some Democrats Against.

The action came after highly conflicting, formal reports on the bill were submitted to the House by its widely divided Ways and Means Committee.

Eleven Democrats contended it was a good bill and constitutional; five Democrats and six Republicans, in separate reports, argued that it went beyond the constitutional power of Congress.

The Guffey bill declares that the mining of coal has a "direct effect" on interstate commerce. Since "Federal regulation is necessary" for "the protection of the public and to prevent restraint upon and to foster interstate commerce in bituminous coal," the 11 Democrats argued, the bill is constitutional.

Calls Bill Invalid.

The five Democrats, led by Representative Cooper, of Tennessee, declared "the bill is in direct conflict with the decision of the Supreme Court in the Schechter case, and will be held unconstitutional."

Representative Lewis (Democrat), Maryland, in a separate report, agreed with the Democratic majority, describing the Constitution as a "'stateman's document * * * not a private courthouse document amenable to litigant or lawyer rules of construction."

The Republicans, in their report, contended the measure showed clearly that President Roosevelt sought to force changes in the Constitution. In some "supplemental views," Representative Knutson (Republican), Minnesota, added that the bill "does not protect the consumer" and will increase the cost of coal.

WPA Now Employs More Than 600,000

'Strike Situation Getting Better,' Hopkins Says.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator, said at his press conference yesterday that the $4,000,000,000 work relief fund now is providing employment for 602,000 persons.

This included members of the Civilian Conservation Corps, who numbered 300,000 before the work relief program began and now total 442,000.

The goal at the start of the work relief campaign was announced at 3,500,000 jobs by November 1.

Commenting on walkouts by WPA employes in protest against $10 to $94 monthly wages, Hopkins said "the strike situation is getting better."

Processing Tax Bill Approved, Validating AAA

which has reached appellate tribunals will be distributed by the Justice Department's plan to have the temporary injunctions dissolved, it was explained.

The effect of these court actions may readily be seen in the sharp diminution in revenue from processing taxes. In the first 13 days of this month collections of processing taxes totaled $9,069,197, compared with $40,107,207 in the same period of last year.

Between July 1 and August 13 the Treasury collected $28,161,163 in processing taxes, compared to $78,927,592 in the same period of last year. Thus it is obvious that the legal attacks on the processing taxes are rapidly drying up the Treasury's revenue from that source.

Procedure Is Devious.

The AAA amendments as originally drafted, after the Boston court decision, would have outlawed all suits on processing taxes already or hereafter collected or assessed. The House approved this provision, but the Senate revised it to permit such suits where the processor showed he had not passed the tax on, either to consumers or producers.

In the conference between House and Senate the provision was rewritten, but the door was left open for suits against the Government to recover processing taxes where the levy had not been passed on. The conferees, however, proposed that before such suits could be filed in Federal courts a claim for recovery must first be made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, who is directed to hold hearings to ascertain the facts on which the claim is based.

The findings of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall become the court record in such suits, the compromise provides. The Comissioner of Internal Revenue has the authority when a claim is filed to call for the production of books and papers of the claimant and to subpena witnesses. Provision is made for suits by persons not processors, but who have paid the tax.

The new legislation, however, also provides that no suit for the recovery of processing taxes may be filed unless a claim is made within six months after the tax is held invalid nor shall such a suit be commenced in less than one year from the date of filing the claim, unless the commissioner has first rendered a decision thereon nor more than five years after the payment of the tax.

Thus the filing of suits hereafter to recover processing taxes is sharply hedged about with legal restrictions. The compromise provision was accepted by both House and Senate—although some objection to it was raised in the latter body. It also applies to taxes already paid under the original AAA.

The purpose of the AAA amendments was to remedy what the courts might regard as legal defects in the original legislation and thus strengthen the constitutional basis of the law and to broaden the power of the Secretary of Agriculture to keep farm prices on a parity with industrial commodity price levels.

The legislation permits marketing agreements to be negotiated regarding the distribution of milk, fruits (except apples), tobacco, vegetables (except when intended for canning), soybeans, pecans, walnuts and naval stores.

The bill also extended for another crop year the Bankhead cotton control act, the Kerr-Smith tobacco control act and authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to set up a similar control system for potato growers through the imposition of a tax of ¾ of a cent a pound on potatoes produced in excess of fixed quotas.

Exchange Bill Praised

By the Associated Press.

The commodities exchange bill was praised by Secretary Wallace yesterday as setting up "necessary standards of fair dealing" and seeking "to curb sharp practices."

The measure, now pending in the Senate after House approval, would extend existing governmental regulation over grain futures to include futures exchanges dealing in cotton, rice, mill feeds, butter and eggs.

In a formal statement of approval, Wallace said:

"It would abolish the bucket-shop and puts-and-calls and make illegal wash sales and other fictitious transactions. It would require the registration of futures commission merchants and floor brokers. Producers' co-operatives would be guaranteed full privileges on the exchanges."

The AAA reported that practically complete returns disclosed 171,691 growers voted in referenda where growers of four types of tobacco approved crop adjustment programs for next year.

Exclusive of Indiana, from which no report has been received, the AAA said 111,792, or 62.8 per cent, of eligible growers voted in the burley referendum. Of these, 109,981, or 93.4 per cent, approved the program. In the fire-cured referendum, the AAA reported that 31,997, or 63 per cent, of the eligible producers participated, with 30,359, or 92 per cent, of voters approving the program.

Plan of Merger For Methodists Nears Success

Bishops and Laymen Study Program of Healing Church Split.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Bishops and laymen representing the three principal branches of the Methodist Church tonight were near agreement on a constitution by which, if adopted, their organizations would be merged into a unified church.

Meeting in suburban Evanston to adopt a program for submission to the general conferences of the three divisions, the delegates had before them only two major problems, they said.

One was selection of a judicial system by which a "supreme court" would check the constitutionality of any action taken by a general conference provided for in plans for the merger.

The other was subdivision of the proposed unified Methodist Church into regional or jurisdictional conferences. Leaders were hopeful that both questions would be settled before the conference here was ended.

Six Regional Conferences.

Formal procedure for the holding of a general conference to replace the annual conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church (Northern), the Methodist Episcopal Church South and the Methodist Protestant Church in event the three units approve the united organization were discussed today.

Delegates suggested that the merging plan contain a provision that the plan would become effective one year after its ratification by each of the general conferences of the three groups.

Dr. H. E. Woolever, of Washington, D. C., editor of the National Methodist Press, said delegates had given tentative approval to a proposal to divide the new united church into six regional or jurisdictional conferences.

They would include, he said, a Western, North Central, South Central, Northeastern, Southeastern and Central conference. The latter, he said, would be for churches which now belong to Negro conferences.

Debated Over Name.

It was tentatively agreed that where Negro churches were members of a white annual conference, as in the North, they would retain such membership. The racial conference, delegates said, was not suggested as an effort toward discrimination, but rather to allow Negro churches to retain their jurisdictional rights.

Delegates from the Methodist Protestant Conference, which has no bishops, debated today the suggestion that the conference elect bishops before the unification plan is approved.

Under the proposed constitution the general conference would determine the number of bishops to be named in each regional conference, but all present bishops would retain their rank.

Final recommendation of a name for the combined conference was delayed by the delegates following a discussion in which it was generally agreed that the suggested name "United Methodist Church" would not be approved.

Many delegates favored the simple title, "the Methodist Church." Before the split in the Methodist Church, which occurred largely because of differences over the ownership of slaves before the Civil War, the church was known as the Methodist Episcopal Church of America.

Hollywords and Paragraphs.

Hollywood, Aug. 15.

GEORGE HAIGHT'S description of picture making is the best. He says: "Picture making is one continuous dress rehearsal."

To any one who ever sat in on a dress rehearsal of a show this is true. At the dress rehearsal the performers are in their costumes; the props are in their places, ready; the director keeps hollering for the correct lights, and the actors play the scene several times until everything is right. They are rehearsing to give the show.

On the set the performers are in their costumes, all the props are in evidence; the director keeps toying with the lights and the camera, and the actors keep playing the scene again and again. The performers not in the scene being shot sit around, eating a sandwich or drinking a soda just as they do in the theater.

The mood and the appearance is the same. There is only one difference. In the theater they are rehearsing to give the show. In the movies they are rehearsing and giving the show.

He has a flood of them and they are all entertaining. At a party the other evening the judge told many, and one that I never saw printed before concerns a trip he made to Ireland.

He was riding in a hansom cab late at night along a deserted street. The driver, who knew Kelly, turned to him and, although no one was about, whispered: "The next time you come back here Ireland will be a Free State." "You don't say so," answered Kelly. "We're ready," went on the cab driver. "We're more powerful than ever. There are 10,000 men in Dublin, armed and ready to strike whenever the signal is given. There are 5,000 men in Cork, armed and ready to start at a moment's notice. There are 4,000 men in Carrick, armed and raring to go."

"Why don't they get the signal and start now?" asked Kelly. "They can't move, but for the police," answered the cab driver.

Prince Georges Reported Free From Paralysis

Maryland County Unusually Clear, the Health Officer Says.

In an effort to allay a growing fear of infantile paralysis in Prince Georges County, Md., Dr. A. B. Hooten, county health officer, yesterday issued a public statement explaining that the community was unusually free from the disease.

He pointed out that only two cases have been reported since last January 1. One was an imported case last April. The other was a child stricken in Riverdale in June.

"There is some comfort," he said, "in observing that even in the severest outbreaks of the past only a very small percentage of the population of the infected areas have been stricken."

Dr. Hooton declared it would be hazardous to prophesy as to the spread of the disease, but he added that "it seems probable we will have a few more cases than normal this year."

A lengthy description of the disease cited the fact that no preventitive serum or vaccine has been proven to be effective, although there is considerable optimism among research workers toward future experiments.

"Mild preventive sprays, such as 1 per cent of peroxide of hydrogen, if carefully used may have some tendency to prevent the disease, yet it is conceivable that the irritation caused by spraying may do more harm than good.

"It is extremely rare that more than one case occurs in the same family. The disease has no tendency to spread in orphanages and hospitals. Apparently it is most often spread by 'acute carriers.'

"Isolation of the patient in a screened room, protecting one's nose and throat from sprays or droplets expelled in sneezing, coughing or talking, using only sterilized eating and drinking utensils and avoidance of undue exposure to crowds are the preventative measures usually advised.

"A larger percentage of city dwellers are immune than those of rural areas. Outbreaks usually occur in hot weather, but sporadic cases may develop in cold weather. Although essentially a hot weather disease, it is seldom seen in the Tropics."

Municipal Park In Bowie Seen By City Group

Commissioners Pick Site for Playground at Town Meeting.

Establishment of a municipal park and playground at Bowie, Md., is under consideration by the commissioners of that town. The site will be the old town hall lot.

The commissioners at a recent meeting also authorized the town clerk to purchase a time clock that will automatically turn the street lights off and on at given hours.

An itemized report, presented the officials at the meeting, showed that $236 had been spent on street work. The town is still due $170 of its share of the State gasoline tax fund.

It was announced that collection of garbage and trash will be started in the near future. No plan has yet been worked out as to the number of collections to be made.

Town Clerk John Zug reported that the ordinary municipal expenses would be approximately $900 this year. The expenses were reduced considerably when the State roads commission took over maintenance of Lanham-Severn and Laurel-Bowie roads.

The Rev. Fred Braun, of Snohonush, Wash., will be the guest minister at the Trinity Lutheran Church, Bowie, this Sunday. The celebration of Holy Communion will be at 8:15 a. m.

Chicken Ranchers Brand Fowl In Attempt to Stop Rustling

Like the herdsmen of the pioneer West, who branded their cattle, poultrymen of seven Northeastern States have adopted "tattooing" to combat the rapidly increasing practice of "chicken rustling," it was announced yesterday at College Park, Md.

Howard Whelan, of the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture, addressing a meeting of the Northeastern Poultry Producers' Council at the University of Maryland, explained the methods used to fight chicken thefts.

He said the tattoo mark—placed on the chicken, not thief—is rapidly gaining favor as a deterrent to thefts and as a means of obtaining court convictions.

A needle-punch is used to implant a specified number in the web of the chicken's wing in indelible ink. Once tattooed, the chicken carries the mark through life. Tests have revealed that the mark still stands out after the bird is cooked.

Advantages Detailed.

Whelan, who is chairman of the council's poultry thieving committee, said that tattooing was becoming increasingly necessary because, where once only individuals made nocturnal visits to chicken coops, today organized gangs prey on large flocks.

Their raids are carefully planned, and by means of large trucks they are able to make their way to "fences" in large cities and thus dispose of hundreds of stolen fowl in a few hours.

In New Jersey, where the tattooing system has been recently used, the thefts have been cut 50 per cent, according to State police. Other States which have installed the system are Massachusetts, Vermont, Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland, and Virginia.

States contemplating establishment of the plan are Delaware, West Virginia, New Hampshire, Maine, Rhode Island and Connecticut. A plan for co-ordinating the tattooing will be presented the council today by the poultry thieving committee.

The 400 poultrymen present also adopted a resolution yesterday asking Congress to pass the now-pending Lea bill as a means of protecting the American poultry industry. The bill provides for excise taxes of 5 cents a dozen on imported shell eggs; 10 cents a pound on imported frozen eggs, and 31 cents a pound on imported dried eggs.

Industry Menaced.

"The poultry industry of the entire United States is seriously menaced by increasing imports of eggs and egg products," the resolution declared. "The dried-egg industry of America has been almost completely annihilated, the frozen-egg industry crippled, and producers of eggs in this country are faced with the prospect of seeing prices for their products driven down to a point below the cost of production by reason of these imports."

Another resolution urged the passage by Congress of the Copeland food and drugs bill. It was declared that "many commercial poultrymen are accepting advertising on face value and are spending annually millions of dollars for useless poultry remedies and thereby losing sight of scientific disease-control programs."

The marshal drove up to the courthouse at 1 p. m. Nearest ranks broke and the rioters surrounded the automobile.

Pulliam was jerked from the driver's seat and dragged into a store opposite the courthouse. Half a dozen men threw him into a chair and warned him not to get up.

Colburn was dragged into the street, disarmed, beaten and stripped of his trousers. Dillingham, protesting against the beating of his bailiff, was cuffed back into his seat in the car. Colburn, too, was put back in the car by the mob.

When William H. Yates, 65, an acquaintance of the marshal, came up to the automobile mob members kicked and beat him.

Several others were beaten for asking questions. Two St. Joseph, Mo., newspapermen were kidnaped and locked in a store. Sheriff Jeff Rowland and his deputy, Myron Montgomery, were warned to stay inside the courthouse.

Dillingham drove back to Kansas City after he was released.

Three other deputy marshals who heard of Dillingham's capture by the mob drove to the northwestern Missouri town late in the day.

The trio, Joe Vandiver, Edward McDonald and Joseph Murphy, saw at once that there were too many rioters to fight. They separated and moved through the crowd to gather evience against the mob leaders.

Half a dozen names were taken by each man. Dillingham brought the badly beaten Colburn to his home in Kansas City and drove back to Platte City. The marshal escaped with a scratched arm, a cut finger and multiple bruises.

Seeks Federal Agents

By the United Press.

Platte City, Mo., Aug. 15.—United States Marshal Henry B. Dillingham, who was beaten by a mob when he attempted to conduct a farm foreclosure sale at Plattsburg tonight, said the rioters were led and trained by Communists.

"The situation in Northwestern Missouri is extremely serious," Dillingham said at his home here. "The leaders of the mob were radicals of the worst sort. Many of the followers were drunk.

"They are highly organized and are practically fanatics. They cursed the Supreme Court and the President. They defied the Governor and all law and order."

The marshal, whose office is in Kansas City, will make a report to Department of Justice officials tomorrow. He revealed that he went to Plattsburg today despite a doctor's order warning him against excitement because of heart disease.

"I must be all cured of the heart trouble now," Dillingham said.

Hopson Admits Effort to Shift Papers' Policy

readily admitted that he had done so.

"Did you threaten to withdraw advertising from the New York Times?" asked Black.

"Yes," said Hopson. "The editorial policy of The Times did more harm than all our advertisements did good. I saw no point in carrying advertising in a paper that carried such half-baked editorials."

Hopson said he sent a representative to see the editors of The Times and tell them "we were trying to protect the interests of the investors."

"We also thought the Hearst newspapers should get more advertising."

Asked if he had sent telegrams to William Randolph Hearst, Hopson said messages were sent to "all prominent people who had any interest in bringing recovery along the lines we believed in."

Hopson said he did not hear directly or indirectly from Hearst.

Hopson said that he had suggested that the Gannett and Scripps-Howard groups of newspapers should be persuaded to switch over.

"The Scripps-Howard group would be worth 20 New York Timeses," he said. "Besides the Scripps-Howard and Hearst newspapers are holding companies themselves. They were told that if this bill passed the heat would soon be turned on them."

"Did you withdraw advertising from the Times?" Black asked.

"I don't think so," the witness replied, "but their advertising men wore out the seats of their pants in our advertising agency for fear they would lose our advertising."

Policy Unchanged.

"Did the Times change its editorial policy?"

"Their editorials were about the same thereafter," Hopson said. "Some were good and some were very bad. One about the dead-man story, emanating from Washington, was very bad."

Hopson evidently referred to reports that names were copied from tombstones and signed to telegrams opposing the utilities bill.

Black read a telegram in which a subordinate of Hopson was advised that letters asking questions should be sent to members of Congress on the theory that they would require replies and that thus Senators and Representatives would "remember them better."

Hopson said he may have sent such telegrams.

"We heard that many members of Congress had not read the bill," he said, "and did not know what it was about. We felt if we could induce Representatives to read the bill it would be modified."

Black referred to messages in which Hopson was reputed to have said the utilities interests should always take the offensive in the campaign against the bill. Hopson admitted he had suggested that when anyone complained about what the utility group was doing the answer should be: "What of it? What's the harm?"

Counter-Lobby Charge.

"Did you make any suggestions that the Administration should be accused of lobbying?" Black asked. "Didn't you send word to people to start a story that the Administration was lobbying?"

"I may have," said Hopson.

As Black's questioning continued, Hopson said:

"You have the papers. You should know."

"I thought you destroyed them," said Black.

"You got them from the telegraph companies," Hopson said. "I understand you subpenaed all the telegrams in the United States. I know of no telegrams being destroyed, but I didn't keep copies of mine."

"Why did your New York office destroy your telegrams?" Senator Schwellenbach, a member of the committee, asked.

"What of it?" Hopson countered.

"Do you think any honest business would destroy its telegrams?" Schwellenbach persisted.

"Certainly," said Hopson. "They would destroy interoffice telegrams. If I talked over the telephone I didn't keep a copy of the conversation."

Hopson attempted to continue but Schwellenbach insisted that he answer questions directly.

"You will answer my questions, or else," he shouted.

"As soon as we sent the telegrams we threw the copies into the waste basket," Hopson said. "I didn't think my telegrams back and forth to my office were anybody's business."

Quizzed on Files.

"You had $900,000,000 of the people's money and you considered it nobody's business," said Schwellenbach. "Is it your policy to destroy telegrams?"

"It is the policy of every well-run business," Hopson replied. "It is our policy to destroy all interoffice memoranda."

Hopson said he had no knowledge of orders to destroy files in offices of his company's representatives in 26 States, but he said one of his associates had inquired of these offices "if they intended to waste a lot of filing space."

"I gave no instructions that anybody do such things," he said. "If I had thought you would be interested I would have kept copies of the telegrams."

Black showed Hopson a copy of a telegram sent from Miami to Hopson's New York office. It said:

"Did you get Hurley straightened out?"

It was signed "Duncan."

Hopson said it had to do with the time of arrival of Patrick J. Hurley, former Secretary of War, on a visit to Miami. Hurley testified last week that his law firm had received $100,000 in fees during the last three years from the Associated Gas & Electric System.

"Did you get frequent reports on how certain congressmen stood?" Black asked.

"Not many."

"Did you suggest that many telegrams be sent to those against the bill?"

"I don't know. I heard one congressman had said he hadn't received any telegrams and I believed he should get some because many people in his district were utility stockholders."

Hopson insisted that he opposed any unauthorized telegrams and that he had never had anything to do with such messages.

Black then showed him a telegram signed, "Oliver Cromwell." It was addressed to Will Rogers, humorist. Hopson said he had suggested the telegram and that Cromwell was a clerk in his office. He said he believed Cromwell had written the message himself.

"Rogers had an inaccurate and unfair statement in his column," Hopson said.

"Why didn't you sign your own name?" Black asked.

"I didn't want to upset Rogers," Hopson said. "I didn't want him to attach undue importance to it."

The message told Rogers that his caricature definition of holding companies was "like kicking an injured turtle to turn him over so the butcher could cut his head off." The message told Rogers that he was giving the impression that utility men were "blackguards, crooks and thieves."

At this point Moultrie Hitt, who appeared as attorney for Hopson, suggested that the hearing adjourn. Black said it would go on for a while.

Hopson testified that he had communications with coal mining interests in connection with TVA.

"Did you ever hear about Elmer, the messenger boy, who got 3 cents apiece for explaining the Wheeler-Rayburn bill to people?" Schwellenbach asked.

"When a person is threatened with having his bread and butter taken away from him he may go to extremes," Hopson said.

Hearing Adjourned.

Black adjourned the hearing at this point, instructing Hopson to appear today immediately after the House committee recesses. Hopson is due to appear before the House committee at 10 a. m. The Senate committee presumably will resume questioning him at noon.

Hitt objected to the arrangement.

"This is too much of a third degree proposition," he said.

"There is no reason for a statement like that," Black retorted. "This man has been wanted for a month."

"I stayed away because my doctor advised me to," Hopson shouted.

The arrangement stood.

As the Senate convened yesterday preparations were made for Hill's contempt trial. Two chairs, one for Hill and one for his attorney, stood in the well of the Senate. Jurney reported that he had served the citation on Hill, but that he had been unable to find Hopson.

Senator Black asked that the trial be postponed until Hopson could be brought in. Later in the day when Hopson did appear, Black indicated the charge would not be pressed.

"The evidence shows that for more than a month Hopson has been dodging, hiding and running to avoid appearing before the special committee of the Senate as a witness," he said. "He has admitted under oath that he sought to escape appearing before the Senate committee, but that he had intended to appear before the Rules Committee of the House."

Byrns Enters Row.

Black said Hopson's guard, who allegedly prevented service of a Senate subpena, had been supplied by O'Connor. He said that under all rules of law Hopson was in contempt of the Senate.

"Whatever may be the reason assigned or the argument advanced," Black concluded, "if a co-ordinate legislative branch should decide to retain the custody of this recalcitrant, dodging and fleeing witness from appearance before the Senate committee, under the rules of comity, in my judgment such protection can be given Hopson and recognized by us."

Speaker Byrns entered the controversy early in the day.

"Mr. Hopson has not completed his testimony before the House committee and therefore is now technically under its jurisdiction and control," he told newspaper men. "I regard this action of the Senate committee in attempting to take him away from us as an affront to the House. It is wholly without precedent or jurisdiction."

As the House convened Representative Wearin (Democrat), Iowa, introduced a resolution to impound the remainder of the $50,000 appropriated to pay the expense of the House investigation and to call the inquiry off.

"They've clearly shown they are not going to get anywhere, he said. "They have had a man like Hopson, with his record, before them for two days and they haven't been able to get anything out of him. It's all foolishness and a waste of money. I'm in favor of cutting it out."

When Chairman O'Connor took the floor he was greeted with applause from most of the House. He submitted a report of the Rules Committee reviewing the occurrences of the last few days. Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, objected to the reading of the report because he said it was critical of the Senate, but he was overruled by the Speaker.

O'Connor then introduced his resolution providing that a warrant be issued for Hopson, but providing also that he be made available to the Senate committee when the House investigators were through with him.

"This is an attempt to keep Hopson from having to appear before the Senate committee," Rankin said. "It is the greatest farce I have ever heard in this House. A warrant would hold him away from the Senate committee where he would be properly investigated."

O'Connor declared that he was interested "in the dignity of the proceedings in this House." He said the procedure involved a question of whether one branch of Congress is subordinate to another.

"Any suggestion that the Rules Committee is trying to protect Hopson or to keep him out of the Senate committee is without foundation," he said. "Interference? It was another body that interfered with us."

O'Connor said Black's previous statements in the Senate "relieves us of the fear that our witnesses will be seized."

"In view of Senator Black's statement I will not press for passage of this resolution now," he said. He asked that the resolution be put on the House calendar.

Trailing Hopson, U. S. Sleuths Relentlessly Corral His Double

Their Cheeks Are Slightly Pink When Error Is Discovered.

Humphries weighs something over 200 pounds. He is bald. He is in the utility business.

That description also accurately fits a much-sought individual named Howard C. Hopson.

Humphries was sitting in the dining room of the Harrington Hotel. A young man seated near him kept looking him over. After a while the young man moved over to Humphries' table.

"Good morning," he said. "Have you been in Washington long?"

"Not very," said Humphries.

The young man began to tell him about some of the wonders of the National Capital. He dwelt particularly on the offices of the Bureau of Investigation of the Justice Department.

"You should come over and see us," said the young man.

"All right," said Humphries.

Accompanied by his new friend, Humphries went to the Justice Building. He saw the fingerprint department, Dillinger's gun and the rest of the sights. It was a pleasant morning. He and the young man went to lunch together. Then they went back to an office in the Justice Department.

Various people began to drift in. They asked questions about the utility business Humphries, being a utility lawyer, told them about it.

Then two more people came in.

"That's the man," said one. "That's Hopson."

A light began to dawn. Humphries has a sense of humor. He was getting a kick out of the situation.

The questioning went on. His interrogators, however, began to frown. They weren't so sure. Finally they became certain—that they were wrong.

"They told me I could leave any time I wanted to," said Humphries. "I did."

Treasury, in company with Amon Carter, Texas publisher. Before we went to dinner on the outdoor public terrace of the hotel, we stopped in Robinson's room to pick him up. He was also a guest at the dinner."

McIntyre denied reports that he made efforts Wednesday night to suppress publication of the story regarding his visit to Robinson's room. He said he talked with one or two press association men during the evening, however, relating substantially to them what he told the press late yesterday. He said he made no request that the story be withheld.

At all events, despite the presence of the newspaperman with Jurney, the unexpected finding of McIntyre and Robert during the search was not revealed, except in a Middle Western newspaper, until yesterday.

McIntyre last night accompanied President Roosevelt to Hyde Park on a week-end visit.

'Baby Coin' Bill Killed by House Vote of 9 to 1

New and Resplendent $1 Paper Issue Planned by the Treasury.

By the Associated Press.

With its chairman contending the Supreme Court would not uphold the Attorney General's contention that State coinage of sub-penny sales tax pieces was illegal, the House Coinage Committee yesterday killed the midget coin bill.

The committee voted 9 to 1 to table the legislation requested by the Administration, for this session at least. Representative White (Democrat), Idaho, was the only member voting for the issuance of new and smaller change. Chairman Somers (Democrat), New York, voted with others against the Administration proposal.

At about the same time, however, the Treasury announced a minor change in one of its products, issuance of a new and more resplendent dollar bill. Instead of the utilitarian "one dollar" on the back, the new certificate will bear the great seal of the United States.

"In opposing the midget coin plan," Somers said, "we took the attitude that the question involved—the minting of a coin with which to pay taxes—is a State matter and should be solved by the States."

His committee, he said, did not oppose the use of tokens so long as the States did not pass them as legal tender.

"I do not believe the Supreme Court would uphold the Attorney General's ruling that the use of these tokens is illegal," he contended.

Contempt All Around.

If there was any bright side to the Hopson-hunting fiasco, it is not yet apparent. The series of incidents that followed congressional attempts to investigate this official of a discredited utility holding company has focused ridicule in several different directions. In their zeal to exploit what is believed to be sensational testimony, legislators on both side of the Capitol have reduced the lobbying investigation to a farcical level.

Congress is rightly sensitive over contempt from witnesses called to testify before its committees. But it gives too little thought to the contempt of the public for legislative tactics of the extravaganza type, which tend to obscure the real issues at stake. The spectacle of Senate and House groups fighting for the custody of a witness expected to make headlines in the press is too crude to be amusing. Instead of arousing resentment against all holding companies, as the lobby investigators apparently set out to do, this horseplay is more likely to cultivate disgust at congressional ineptitude.

Howard C. Hopson deserves no consideration from either committee. His conduct ever since the hunt for him began has been far from admirable. But his importance in the subject at issue has been grossly overemphasized. When the chairman of the House Rules Committee seeks to protect a witness of this character from the Senate investigating committee two equally undesirable impressions are created. One is that the House committee must want to protect the witness. The other is that the Senate committee has cheap publicity as its chief objective.

In this silly scramble over a utilities official of very questionable standing in the counsels of the industry he is supposed to represent, Congress has apparently forgotten the holding company bill over which the row started. Instead of buckling down to a study of the far-reaching ramifications of this measure, groups on both sides are trying to distort the issue by hysterical methods. Unless these tactics are quickly rationalized, the Hopson case is likely to be remembered more as an example of congressional bungling than of disgraceful lobbying.

The AAA In Reverse.

After using every means at its disposal to raise farm prices during the last two years, the AAA has become suddenly solicitous over the welfare of the consumer. Wheat acreage is to be increased next year, to insure "both the farmer and the consumer against the contingency of another year of bad wheat weather," and Secretary Wallace is considering plans to stimulate hog production.

Two years ago all AAA energy was devoted to encouraging the tendencies it now seeks to counteract. Food crop surpluses have largely disappeared and the immediate problem is one of restoring a balance that will prevent undue hardships for families with meager incomes. The AAA deserves a good deal of credit for adjusting its program to the new situation, an achievement that is often difficult for a Government bureau. Regardless of how its policies may be modified, however, the effect of radically changed agricultural conditions is to challenge the future usefulness of the whole setup.

In an effort to meet this challenge Secretary Wallace already has pictured the adjustment administration in a new role. Its function is no longer merely to reduce crops, but to stabilize food production. With that objective it can throw its machinery from reverse into high gear without being subject to a charge of inconsistency.

In fact, Secretary Wallace already has devised a very dubious argument to make the AAA hog program, which was originated as a price-raising device, appear a great conservation measure in the interests of consumers. "The volume of pork farmers can market," he says in an official statement, "is wholly regulated by the amount of feed on hand * * * The slaughter of pigs in 1933, therefore, saved 60 to 70 million bushels of corn," thus enhancing the current supply of pork.

Is it possible that Mr. Wallace has forgotton that the AAA's acreage reduction scheme, aided by the drought, cut the 1934 production of corn more than a billion bushels below the average output? Certainly the resulting shortage of feed must be a large factor in the present scarcity of pork.

There is nothing in the record of the AAA to suggest that it will be able to stabilize food production successfully. Crop yields are largely dependent upon the weather, which is just as capricious under bureaucratic control as without it. Mere assignment of the functions of a prophet to the Secretary of Agriculture through the AAA amendments will not make his guess any more accurate than it was when he ordered a drastic curtailment of crops just before the worst drought in our history.

Continuation of the AAA can be justified only if the Government intends to maintain permanent control over agriculture. This is no time to extend emergency powers to that organization on the assumption that an acute crisis of over-production still exists. Rather it is a time to revert to the operation of economic law. Farmers do not now need a Government agency to advise them to raise hogs to replace those arbitrarily slaughtered by the AAA. Unless it is irrevocably committed to a crude regimentation of agriculture, Congress might well put the AAA bill aside until the new situation can be thoroughly considered on the basis of its economic advisability.

At The Cost Of Conscience.

The decisive defeat of Senator Vandenberg's motion to postpone action on the tax bill until next session, followed by the crushing of Senator La Follette's rational amendments, made it a foregone conclusion that the Senate would approve the measure as desired by the White House. Now it will go to conference—a conference which either will deadlock over incompatible views or, as Senator Vandenberg says, will "melt under the August sun into an agreement born of dictation, desperation and exhaustion."

Administration supporters made no attempt to defend the bill against spirited and able criticism not merely of its specific proposals but of the manner in which it is being rushed through Congress. Senator Hastings, dissenting member of the Finance Committee, did not even take time to discuss the bill on its merits during the debate on the Vandenberg motion, being content to dismiss it as "without merit." He discoursed at considerable length, however, upon the extraordinary way in which the House bill had been hurriedly revised in committee and subsequently rewritten under Administration pressure over the week-end, without the knowledge of some members of the committee.

"Under normal conditions," Senator Hastings said, "the important matters would have been decided by the Finance Committee with the greatest of care, and any member of the committee who could not be present would have had an opportunity to be polled and thus express his opinion. The Senate, for these reasons, can not, therefore, give the same weight to the committee report that ordinarily attaches and ought to attach to a tax bill or any other bill."

Judging from the patent reluctance with which both House and Senate responded to the executive command to vote new taxes before adjournment, Senator Hastings probably does not exaggerate in saying that the tax bill does not meet the actual desires of 10 per cent of the members of Congress. The present unwilling and sullen acquiescence in executive orders is a more abject surrender of legislative discretion than that witnessed when the present Administration took office. Then Congress was bewildered, and ready to believe blindly in the superior knowledge and capable political strategy of the President and his advisers. There is now no similar excuse for a spineless failure on the part of legislators to assert their intelligence and vote as their collective conscience, if not stifled by presidential pressure, would command.

When executive dictation is carried to the extreme of ignoring disaffection within the ranks of partisan supporters, and when legislators simply close their ears to a Nation-wide wave of vigorous and unanswerable criticism, democratic government is not far from shipwreck. The manner in which the tax bill has been rushed through to passage is perhaps an even greater menace to public welfare than the substance of that measure, aptly described by Senator Vandenberg as a form of "midsummer madness."

Sunny Jim Preston.

Ordinarily, it would be impossible to refer to even the most well-informed and energetic official as an institution. But in the case of James D. Preston, who is resigning his post as Senate librarian to become assistant to the administrative secretary of the National Archives, no lesser term will serve. For he has been at the Capitol so long—more than 38 years—that in the minds of the multitude of Congressmen and newspapermen with whom he has worked he is regarded fondly as an integral and well-nigh irreplaceable adjunct of the venerable legislative mill.

Years have only stimulated the development of Jim Preston. Beginning his local career at the age of 14, as typist for the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Interocean and Boston Journal, he rose steadily to become superintendent of the Senate press gallery and, more recently, librarian of the Senate. As he worked he cultivated in himself an enthusiasm for vital history, both current and of an older day, particularly in the too-much-disregarded field of official notes and documents. Last year his interest in the technique of conserving such papers carried him abroad, where, at his own expense, he studied methods used in the British Museum, many of which he introduced to Washington archivists.

Now he leaves The Hill to go to the new Archives Building. His talent and long experience will be invaluable in the important business of restoring and preserving priceless historical papers. But he will always be welcomed back to the Capitol. There his keen eye and careful memory have brought to the Nation, through the hundreds of correspondents he has helped, the steadying aid of orderly facts, quickly and concisely arrayed. And not the least of his contribution has been the charm of a genial and delightful personality which the archives of all recorded history could not render stale or crabbed.

Britain And Italy.

Three very different leaders of British public opinion, whose attitudes on lesser matters have often greatly varied, have this week united to denounce Italian policy toward Ethiopia. Their observations are an indication of a stiffening British attitude which is not the least of the obstacles confronting Mussolini's adventure in imperialism. And the different points emphasized by Gen. Smuts, Viscount Snowden and former Premier Lloyd George show further how very realistic is this endeavor to prevent the rape of Ethiopia while there still is time.

On Monday, in Capetown, Gen. Smuts denounced Italian policy in an interview of surprising frankness, considering that this former Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa is still in responsible office as Minister of Justice of that Dominion. None know African problems better than the man who was supreme commander of the Boer armies. And the world must pay attention when Gen. Smuts predicts "intense racial and color feeling" throughout all Africa in the event of an invasion of Ethiopia by Italy.

Two days after this significant warning from South Africa, Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer in Premier MacDonald's government, emerges from retirement to make an even more alarming prediction. Mussolini's ambitions, asserts this thoughtful and generally reticient British labor leader, "will not stop short with the conquest of Ethiopia." It will have European repercussions making "a general war inevitable."

Still a third contribution to the molding of British opinion in the present crisis comes, simultaneously with Snowden's statement, from the man who was premier of Great Britain in the fateful years of 1916-1922. David Lloyd George is still a figure to be reckoned with in British politics. When he tells a London audience that the present Paris negotiations are to discuss "how they can deliver Ethiopia on the cheap to Italy," his calculated intent to stiffen the attitude of the present government is clear.

Two months ago a referendum conducted by the British League of Nations Union showed a vote of two to one, in more than 1,500,000 ballots, in favor of military measures against nations which are clearly aggressors in violation of the Covenant of the League. This general sentiment is strongly fortified, in the case of Ethiopia, by anxiety regarding the internal peace of Britain's African territories; by fear that control of the sources of the River Nile may be alienated to potentially hostile hands, and by apprehension regarding the peace of Europe as a whole in the event that Italy casually upsets the present uneasy balance.

These factors alone—and many others are involved—explain why the present negotiations in Paris will not be the last effort to prevent Mussolini from proceeding according to the schedule of invasion mapped out in Rome. The forces with which Il Duce must reckon far exceed the difficulties of climate, terrain and courageous Ethiopian resistance, formidable as these alone may prove to be.

As the bitterly anti-British tone of the Italian press itself reveals, behind the embattled figure of Haile Selassie a much more powerful antagonist is taking shape. It is the determination of Great Britain both to safeguard her empire and to check Mussolini's contemptuous attitude toward the system of collective action for securing peace.

A New Deal In Vests.

Is it possible that at last men's clothes are in for radical change? And if so, will it be a progressive step or merely a reversion to fashions of other eras?

Lately all sorts of issues have arisen regarding male attire, not only here but abroad. First the Scots brought up the question of what color tie should be worn with evening kilts. The outcome of this dispute can be of little interest to those of us without kiltish ambitions. Next, the Kansas City chief of police ordered that no officer on his force should be privileged to grow hair on his upper lip. This was a decided throw-back to the days when the Macedonians shaved their beards so that the enemy could not thus seize them. And no later than this sultry week a man was hauled into a New York City court for refusing to don a coat before entering a certain public elevator. The brotherhood of America heaved a sigh of relief when he got off without a sentence as well as without his coat.

Now a Gotham stylist comes boldly forward and predicts that fall and winter wardrobes for the stronger sex will include old-rose shirts, jade-green velvet "host suits," and dark blue derbies. This seems a step ahead of those tricky little tams with feathers that used to delight the heart of Henry VIII. The Mad Hatter of Manhattan goes even further and says that the well-dressed man may sport beneath his dinner coat a canary yellow "fun-vest." Who knows but what he may be right? Nevertheless these jackets will never be popular until the average man is sure just who will have the fun out of them—himself or the public.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

To Prevent Degeneration.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his interesting communication, "What Does It All Mean?" Philip McCray is naively puzzled by the attitude of transients on relief who demand of the Administration jobs at wages above the miserable pittance now provided. That the unemployed should not meekly accept, but boldly challenge, what is an admittedly niggardly dole seems to fill Mr. McCray with bewildering astonishment.

It should be explained to your bemused correspondent that the phenomenon of the "Fighting Transient" means simply that the unemployed American is determined not to accept passively the brutalization and destitution which the present relief set-up makes inevitable. They demand not merely work, but work which will permit the retention of both health and self-respect. Surely that is not alien to the traditions of our people. Why, then, should Mr. McCray be surprised? Nor is it true that those on relief consider themselves in a class separate from the ordinary worker.

"The ordinary laborer who finds his work where he can" is as extinct as the dodo. He went out of existence with the onset of the Great Depression. He is, in Mr. McCray's unfortunate phrase, your "professional relief man." Even the Federal Government, in its countless bureaucratic reports, has had to concede that, as a consequence of the improved industrial technology, a vast reserve army of labor has been created which no future cyclical booms will ever be able to absorb. It is to prevent these potential builders of the future from degenerating into loafers, tramps, beggars, etc., that the "Fighting Transient" makes his stirring appeal.

No Jefferson Memorial.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In answer to an editorial in The Post and also an extensive letter in that paper signed by W. F. Wilmoth, proposing a national monument to Thomas Jefferson, the writer would like to remind The Post and Mr. Wilmoth of the immortal words of Andrew Jackson—"The Federal Union, it must be preserved."

If Jefferson's ideas had prevailed, we would have had no United States, but a lot of petty republics; nothing to hold them together, soon to be dismembered like Poland by European powers. Mr. Wilmoth says Jefferson "contributed so much to the establishment of the Republic." This he certainly did not do. With all the power of his brilliant mind, his subtle and skillful political ability, he sought in consistent and often savage manner the formation of a Federal National Government. He always opposed Washington, except in some lukewarm and uncertain concessions which he made when he had the Presidency in view. In the time of deepest peril for the infant Nation; instead of supporting Washington and his ragged, starving soldiers at Valley Forge, he absolutely deserted him and occupied himself with plans for the University of Virginia (a good thing at another time) and various local schemes, like a man planting flowers in his own front yard while his city was burning!

With all his brilliance and ability, he had a narrow mind which was obsessed with his idea of States' rights and could not, or would not, see that a country of so great an area and so many States could not hold together and form an independent nation without a central government which would have the power under the Constitution to act, not for one or two favorite States, but for all.

No man, no matter what he has done for his own section of the country, deserves a national monument who abused and maligned Washington and that in his time of greatest travail. He hated, fought and obstructed in every way he could all the work of John Marshall.

Therefore, I say and believe there are thousands who will agree with me, there should be no national monument to one who favored secession and helped to sow the seeds of the Civil War.

Nazi Currency Violations.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Almost daily the Hitler government in Germany is sending over, or passing uncensored to our American newspapers, news items about alleged violations of the German currency laws by Catholic sisterhoods and clergymen. Up to now we have seen no light shed on the truth of these charges by the press of this country, though that truth could be obtained without any great effort.

Now the truth is simply this, as has been established in all the cases so far investigated, but taking in particular those concerned with loans obtained from Holland by the accused prior to the present discriminating currency laws; the priests and religious were paying back these loans, as they felt in conscience obliged to do, and without any profit through the exchange of reichmarks and Dutch guilders, and in most cases innocent of the government's discrimination between public and private debts.

The laws, like those in Mexico against religion and human rights, were fundamentally unjust. Exchange was legal for other German interests; Catholic works of charity and religion were placed, as a writer in America said last week, "between the devil of repudiation and the deep sea of governmental penalties." The trials of the religious were colored by the Nazi press. The government not only confiscated the repaid money but imposed heavy and pauperizing fines and the hardship of imprisonment on these conscientious priests and sisters. As the same writer adds: "Behind it all is the plan to destroy the Church's charitable and educational work in the interest of the totalitarian state."

To Split Kerr Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read your persuasive editorial, "Blocked By Unfair Criticism," in behalf of Kerr immigration bill. Broadly speaking, this bill would do two things. It would make it easier to deport alien criminals and it would give an interdepartmental committee discretionary powers to permit certain deportable aliens to remain in this country. There is general agreement that the provision of the Kerr bill which would make it easier to deport alien criminals should be enacted into law. There is not general agreement on giving an interdepartmental committee discretionary powers to permit deportable aliens to remain in this country. Therefore, is it not reasonable to make separate bills out of these two provisions so that Congress may consider each provision on its own merits?

Representative Dies, a former member of the House Immigration Committee and now a member of the Rules Committee, has introduced a bill which embodies the first provision of the Kerr bill. Representatives Taylor and Focht, of the House Immigration Committee, and Senator Russell, of the Senate Immigration Committee, have introduced bills which would let Congress itself use discretionary powers as to deportation in meritorious hardship cases. Why have not these bills been voted upon by Congress? In any case, why should not the two provisions in the Kerr bill be voted upon separately?

Our immigration officials are not to be envied—the task is a difficult one and the work is subjected to many kinds of pressure both from alien groups and American groups. My sympathies go out especially to the Commissioner General. In the meantime, however, why not separate the two distinct provisions of the Kerr bill into two bills, so that we can take action in deporting criminal aliens as soon as possible? It is almost certain that this provision of the Kerr bill could be passed immediately.

"Amateur Socialists."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Accept my compliments on your splendid editorial of the tenth instant, entitled "Billions for a Botchery." It is unfortunate it can not be read by every voter, as it is certainly an awakener, and should arouse grave thoughts in the most stupid minds respecting the disastrous course along which the Nation is being hurried by the amateur socialists that an unkind fate has placed in charge of the destinies of America. Time and events will prove that the election of Franklin D. Roosevelt was the greatest calamity that has befallen our Nation since the Civil War.

Regarding the letter of Mr. Samuel Saloman in the same issue expressing his poor opinion and disapproval of your editorials, it may be said incidentally that he has a monopoly of his opinion, as the writer hears only praise of them. His attitude may be due to the fact that he is a New Dealer, and he dislikes criticism of the New Deal, even though it be constructive. Such is not an uncommon characteristic of human nature. We disapprove of that which we do not like, regardless of its intrinsic merits. OBSERVER.

Respect Wanting.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was with mingled feelings of amazement and regret that I read the account in The Post of August 10 of the "fox hunt" staged by a Seattle club, in which the Japanese Emperor was represented as pulling a jinrikisha. In view of Japan's attitude toward the recent Vanity Fair incident, an attitude clearly explained by Ambassador Saito, this burlesque gives every indication of being a grave affront to that nation and, as such, should receive strong official condemnation. We of America can not understand a nation endowing its ruler with aspects of divinity, but since this is the case with Japan, it is therefore our duty to accord it the greatest possible respect.

The Post Impressionist

From Caine To Howells

Post Office, Friday.

TWO events, otherwise as far separated as the literary poles, occur almost simultaneously in the book-world. There come signs of a Howells revival, and there comes news of the final settlement of Hall Caine's estate—just about four years after the latter writer's death.

Many people did not care for Howells' work, but few denied that he was an artist—and he went to his grave relatively poor. A vast number devoured Hall Caine's novels, but no serious voice attributed to him genuine artistry—and yet his property is valued at a million dollars and more.

To The Post-Impressionist—who knew Sir Thomas Henry Hall Caine slightly, William Dean Howells far better—an odious comparison is irresistibly suggested.

* * *

No matter what others thought of his stories, Sir Thomas ranked them among things immortal. Figuratively as well as literally, he draped himself in a Tennysonian cloak. His scorn for his detractors was equalled only by his masculine counterpart: Marie Corelli.

* * *

We remember what was probably the last and certainly the most characteristic interview he gave in America. He had the temerity to take toward his adverse critics the old stand taken by Disraeli and, without giving that illustrious predecessor the credit of quotation marks, described those offenders as novelists who had failed. Even Disraeli, with far better cause of complaint, lacked the daring which Sir Thomas displayed; for Disraeli spoke through a novel—"Lothair"—and through the mouth of one of its characters, but the author of "The Woman Thou Gavest Me" spoke over his own thin pepper-and-salt beard.

It was surprising that almost nobody recognized the statement as second-hand. It was more surprising that, at so late a date, Hall Caine should have expected anybody to accept it.

* * *

Of course, it might have been superficially accepted if applied to certain reviewers of certain Reviews. Sir Thomas, however, was specifically referring to the book-reviewers of the daily newspaper, whereas most of that type are by no means novelists who have failed; they are young men who have yet to fail as novelists—or to succeed.

Besides, the average newspaper book-reviewer doesn't set himself up as an arbiter of literary worth. He endeavors merely to furnish a series of descriptive comments upon current books, so that his readers may determine whether these are books which they, the reviewers' patrons, want to buy.

* * *

Hall Caine was a critic who took up fiction because he failed at criticism. But there was no use telling him that. No shaft could have pierced his faith in the inspirational nature of his work. . . .

* * *

In a brilliant introductory essay to one of his last books, William Dean Howells started to talk of the man of letters as a man of business, but reached the conclusion that an author is "merely a workingman;"

"If he is sick or sad and can not work, if he is lazy or tipsy and will not, then he earns nothing. He can not delegate his business to a clerk or a manager; it will not go on while he is sleeping. The wage he can not demand depends strictly upon his skill and diligence."

* * *

The world has been so accustomed to hearing fine phrases about literary men from literary men—like Hall Caine—that the revival of this theory flings its shaft of surprise. Yet a serious consideration of it carries also the conviction that Howells said a finer thing for his fellow authors than many of those who have thought to rank themselves far higher.

He was not speaking of fiction-factories such as the elder Dumas instituted, nor of the financially elect and artistically damned authors who catch the vulgar taste of the hour and die with the succeeding stroke of the clock. He was speaking for genuine literary artists.

The service which an author does his fellows may be great or small. If you are yourself a writer, you will want to rank him, with Carlyle, as "prophet, priest and king." If you are not, you will probably rank him as something infinitely less. But, however you rank him, he remains, in the life of trade, a day-laborer.

* * *

And "I," said Howells, "am neither sorry nor ashamed for this; I am glad and proud to be of those who eat their bread in the sweat of their own brows . . . I think my bread is the sweeter for it . . . And I wish I could make all my fellow-artists realize that.

"It ought to be our glory that we bring into the world something that was not choately there before . . . And we ought to feel the tie that binds us to all toilers . . . not as a galling chain, but as a mystic bond also uniting us to Him who works hitherto and evermore."

* * *

Fair Enough

'A Penny For (Their) Thoughts.'

New York, Aug. 15.

NOTICE has been received of a five-day thinking tournament to be held at Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., under the auspices of the Williamstown Institute of Human Relations. This event is successor, in a way, to the old Williamstown Institute of Politics which used to import noted thinkers from the old world every summer to think about conditions. The more the institute of politics thought about conditions, however, the worse conditions became, so it was deemed wise a couple of years ago to suspend these meetings. The cost of promoting this cerebration was a great burden and the gate receipts were not sufficient to pay the nut, or overhead, even though the price of admission was $50 a head. In fact, the high price of tickets probably had some bearing on the suspension because $50 would buy a ringside seat at a heavyweight championship fight even in the palmy days of the memorable Tunney-Dempsey civic uplift contest in Chicago.

• • • •

THE new tournament on human relations has Mr. Newton D. Baker among the seeded thinkers, but the entry list is not an all-star aggregation and, therefore, the management hopes to make a success of the enterprise at a flat price of $5 for the entire five days. You can not expect the best thought at such a price but it should be pretty good. At this rate an attendance of between 400 and 500 spectators, or thinking fans, is looked for, but it is hardly expected that the ticket scalpers will buy up the ringside seats and hold them for a premium. Of course, if the New York milk fund should decide to cut in, the success of the promotion would be assured. In that case, there would be an intensive ballyhoo, featuring hungry babies, and showing the leading competitors sitting with their heads in their hands and with their brows burrowed, training conscientiously to give their best when the bell rings. There would be interesting articles tracing the careers of the outstanding thinkers from the time they had their first thoughts and mysterious rumors that this one or that one had been doped or injured his head while tussling with a big raw-boned idea only to be X-rayed by the official psychiatrist and declared to be in the pink of condition. There would be workouts with light, fancy ideas for speed and timing and sessions of mental calisthenics to develop intellectual agility. After several weeks of mental wood-chopping, light and heavy bag-punching and sessions of slam-bang ratiocination, each entrant would declare himself trained to the minute, with no excuse to offer in case of defeat and a promise to be a thinking champion if victorious.

• • • •

BUT the milk fund, which overlooks few opportunities to say "meet your partner" to the promoters of successful attractions, has made no advances to the Williamstown Institute of Human Relations. Experience indicates that the customers do not care much for thinking as a spectacle, yet Mr. Tunney, one of the great minds of pugilism, was never quite as interesting as when he sat down pensively on the floor in Chicago and spent 14 seconds alone with his thoughts. There is encouragement, too, in the career of Mr. Jack Kearns who made more than a million dollars thinking for Jack Dempsey. Mr. Kearns thought so hard that he worked his brain to the very bone and seems to have thought himself out at the present writing. Given another heavyweight who could execute his ideas, however, he would soon come back as a master mind of the roped arena.

Your correspondent, who has seen almost every other type of tournament, has put in for a press pass to the Williamstown conference and might go up to watch the intellects in action just for the experience. Even bridge tournaments have caught on with the public, and if there is pulling power in the spectacle of four surly sour pusses scowling across a card table there might be some charm in a line-up of philosophers telling one another what they think.

• • • •

IT seems regrettable, however, that such an earnest body of men and women can not introduce a slight element of brutality into their work because championship bridge was put over as a spectacle by a sudden swirl of ugly passion in a resort on the Jersey coast about a year ago. In that sudden swirl, one of the bridge gladiators reached over and picked up an opponent by the ear and an event which had been about as stirring as the sight of a man reading a book suddenly became a popular competitive sport. There is always a chance of another swirl.

It would make all the difference in the world and bring the thinking experts from the papers on the run with their portable typewriters if an Oxford Ph. D., preferably one with whiskers, should slug a Harvard Ph. D. over the head with a two-ppund book without any illustrations in it. "A penny for your thoughts" is an ironic contrast to the $3,000,000 gate for ten brisk rounds of lefts and rights to the face and body.

New Tolstoy

By William Lyon Phelps

READING some novels is an amusing pastime; reading some others is an anaesthetic; reading some others is a source of information; reading some others is a stimulation. Reading a novel by Tolstoy is an experience.

I shall never forget the first time when I read Tolstoy's "Anna Karenina." It seemed more real than anything I had ever observed in the course of my life. It had a tremendous and permanent effect on my own mental life; so that I can truthfully say I was in some ways a different man after I read that novel.

• • • •

Now the centenary edition of the works of Tolstoy is in course of publication. The books are translated by Aylmer and Louise Maude. Mr. Maude is an Englishman who knew Tolstoy intimately, and is an expert and accurate translator. Furthermore, two of the volumes in this set are "The Life of Tolstoy," by Aylmer Maude, by far the best biography of him in English.

The complete set of this centenary edition will be 21 volumes, and is almost all published. For every volume there is an introduction written by a man of letters; among these contributors of prefaces are Shaw, Galsworthy, H. G. Wells, Granville-Barker, St. John Ervine, Jane Addams, Hugh Walpole, Gilbert Murray, Rebecca West.

• • • •

For those who can not possibly afford the centenary edition, and who have not access to a public library containing it, let me recommend the Maude Tolstoy, consisting of the chief works in the same translation in the World's Classic Series. They are very cheap.

They contain not only the chief works, but the complete biography by Mr. Maude. Everyone should have Tolstoy as part of his mental furniture.

Liberal Hopes In Canada

Mackenzie King, One-time Premier, Looks With Confidence At October Polls.

Prime Minister Bennett yesterday announced that the general elections in Canada will be held October 14.

By William Marchington.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Ottawa (By Mail).

THE Liberal Party of Canada, headed by the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister from 1921 to 1930, is one of the great historic parties of the Dominion and since confederation in 1867 has shared almost equally with the Conservative Party the control of the federal government. Mr. King and his followers are entering the present general election campaign confident of victory, since the Liberals have, within the last few years, captured control of the legislatures in eight of the nine provinces of the Dominion and only recently swept a Conservative administration from office in Prince Edward Island by winning every one of the 30 seats in the Assembly, an occurrence without precedent in Canada.

After being badly shattered as a party by the conscription controversy, which drove many of their ablest leaders into a coalition with the Conservatives, the Liberals made a remarkable recovery after the war and dominated the situation at Ottawa from 1921 to 1930. They were enabled to do so by the solidarity of the French-Canadian vote on their side, but the ingrained conservatism of this French-Canadian block operated as a dead weight to check such reforming tendencies as the leaders of Liberalism possessed. As a consequence the Liberal administrations, while they accomplished certain reforms, stopped far short of implementing many of the pledges of the party official platform which was drawn up in 1919 at a national convention when Mr. Mackenzie King was chosen leader.

They failed, for instance, to make tariff reductions on the scale that they had promised and they used the excuse of lack of jurisdiction on the part of the federal Parliament to avoid the enactment of industrial reforms like the establishment of the eight-hour day, to which Canada was committed by her adherence to a convention of the International Labor Organization. As a consequence, toward the end of its term of office in 1930, the Liberal Party had forfeited the confidence of the radical and reforming elements in Canada and their hostility or indifference to its fate contributed largely to the smashing defeat which it suffered in 1930.

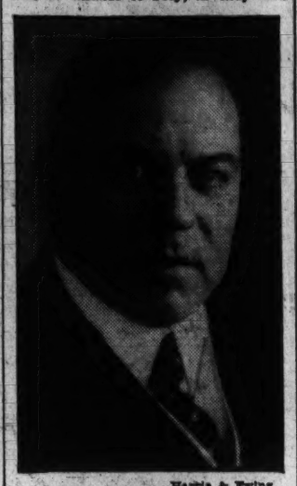
ON the opposition benches the Liberal Party in the House of Commons, with a strength of about 90, has filled with considerable success the role of vigilant critics of the government's policies and administrative actions. But Premier Bennett stole a march upon them when he produced his New Deal program, and by a series of industrial reform measures proceeded to implement Canada's obligations under the I. L. O. conventions. He derided the Liberals' excuse of constitutional obstacles for their previous inaction about these matters. Indeed, he claimed that since the constitution clothed the federal Parliament with authority to take the necessary steps for the fulfillment of any treaty obligations, federal commitments under the international conventions overrode any provincial rights of jurisdiction about wages, hours of labor, etc.

The Liberals challenged the validity of this thesis, but in their anxiety to avoid at all costs risk of exposure to the charge that they were opponents of desirable reforms, they accepted in principle the industrial and social legislation which the government submitted at the recent session and contented themselves with suggesting amendments for its improvement.

Mr. Mackenzie King, the Liberal leader, derives his political faith from Gladstone and Cobden and although he has compromised it in regard to the tariff, he remains adamant about the intervention of the state in business and against collectivist adventures generally. His views moreover are fully shared by his French-Canadian followers and with their help he has been able to impose them upon the whole party. As a consequence the Liberal Party has in recent years been continually charged with adopting a negative attitude and showing no disposition to offer any constructive practical solution for the unemployment problem, the railway imbroglio and other pressing questions.

• • • •

THE appearance of the new Reconstruction Party with its set of reform proposals has rudely disturbed these dreams and awakened the Liberal leaders to the fact that they will have nothing like a walkover in the election. They will be unable to rely, as they had been doing, upon the votes of malcontent Conservatives, who will now join Mr. Stevens, and they can no longer be assured of the substantial independent vote, which was ready to condemn and punish the Bennett ministry for its sins of omission and commission.



Harris & Ewing.

RIGHT HONORABLE W. L. MACKENZIE KING.

Mr. Mackenzie King, in the campaign now under way, will have to offer to the voters a constructive program containing the liberal solutions for the unemployment, railway and other problems. He will not propound any very radical solutions for two reasons, firstly, because he knows that they would be liable to be repudiated by Mr. Taschereau, the so-called Liberal Premier of Quebec, who is the de facto leader of the reactionary wing of Liberalism, and, secondly, he will want to attract the votes of conservative business men who, despairing of the fortunes of their own party, want to be sure of the installation of a stable moderate government with a good working majority at Ottawa. Mr. King and his lieutenants will make a strong bid for the agrarian vote with pledges to terminate the high protectionist regime which has prevailed since 1930 and bring back the tariff duties to the level existing under the last Liberal administration.

The issue of reciprocity with the United States will also cut some figure in the Liberal campaign. For months past the Bennett ministry has been engaged in negotiations with the Roosevelt Administration for a reciprocity agreement, but as soon as one obstacle is disposed of another is encountered and at present the project seems in a state of suspended animation. At any rate, for weeks past the trade and tariff experts of the Canadian government have been standing by ready to proceed to Washington at a moment's notice, but the invitation which they are awaiting never comes. So there seems scant prospect that a reciprocity agreement will be concluded in time for the Conservatives to use it as an electioneering counter.

• • • •

IF it is not achieved, they will profess their zeal for such a pact and argue that they are the only party to be entrusted with the task of safeguarding Canadian interests in trade dealings with such a puissant and domineering neighbor. To this the Liberals will retort that the reciprocity negotiations have come to naught because the Conservatives, being devotees of high protection for Canadian industries, have been unable to offer the concessions which the Roosevelt Administration requires in order to be able to present an appetizing bargain to the American public. If they, the Liberals, are put in power they will by an enlargement of Canada's tariff concessions soon include a mutually satisfactory and profitable treaty, so they say.

Cooperative Commonwealth Party Also Challenges Reign Of Conservatives.

On the constitutional issue, whereas the Conservatives are going to ask a mandate for amendments to the constitution, calculated to strengthen the federal authority, the Liberals will admit the necessity of some amendments, but will take a very cautious line about them as they know that the people of Quebec are great sticklers for provincial rights and are very suspicious of any political surgery with the constitution lest their sacred privileges in regard to religion and language, now firmly guaranteed by the British-North American act, be endangered.

There remains to be considered the prospects of the fourth party, the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation, which was formed two years ago as a political holding company for various radical agrarian and labor organizations and groups of socialist intelligentsia. Its leader, J. S. Woodsworth, is a labor member who is now a very competent parliamentarian and is liked by all parties for his courage and sincerity, but the real architects of the party's policy are a group of young intellectuals, many of whom are former Rhodes scholars now attached to the staffs of Canadian universities. Under their inspiration the C. C. F. Party, as it is popularly called, has adopted a program which could justifiably be called Socialistic and does not differ materially from that of the British Labor Party.

• • • •

THE word "Socialism," however, is carefully eschewed, because it still has terrors for many Canadian farmers who retain a touching pioneer faith in the merits of rugged individualism. But the election manifesto which Mr. Woodsworth has issued on behalf of the C. C. F. boldly declares that the fundamental issue of the election is between the reform of capitalism, which the other three parties advocate, and its complete abolition, which is the aim of the C. C. F. They would like to nationalize all the railways, the banks and the basic industries and set up a collectivist marketing system for all Canadian products, and they also proclaim their outright antagonism to Canada's participation in any more capitalist wars, in which category they place the late Great War.

The C. C. F. is handicapped by the lack of an efficient nation-wide organization and its feeble press support, which is confined to a few weekly papers, but it has considerable strength in certain sections of the Dominion. It has its firmest foothold in the two most westerly provinces of British Columbia and Alberta, but it also has a very considerable following in Saskatchewan and Manitoba and in the industrial centers of Ontario. Up till this summer it had made very little headway east of the Ottawa River, but there is now some evidence that despite the ban imposed upon the party by the Roman Catholic hierarchy of Quebec, which abhors any brand of socialism, its doctrines are now for the first time making converts among the French-Canadian working classes to such an extent that it has a good chance of winning one or two seats in Montreal.

It is difficult, however, to see how the C. C. F. at the present election can offer any serious challenge to the two senior parties by itself and now it will have to compete with the new Reconstruction Party for the radical vote. Indeed, it is today threatened with serious defections in Alberta, where a certain William Aberhart, a Calgary school teacher, has organized a Social Credit Party to advocate a scheme of social credit based on the Douglas theory and has, since Mr. Stevens launched his new party, offered to discuss a basis of co-operation with it. There has been some talk of a working alliance or even a merger between the C. C. F. and the Reconstruction Party as their platforms have many common points, but Mr. Stevens' denunciations of Socialism have annoyed the C. C. F. leaders and convinced them that an alliance with him is impossible.

At present all the political experts are agreed that the portents indicate the Liberals will probably emerge from the election with a comfortable majority over all other parties combined. But they will be elected not so much as the result of any widespread popular enthusiasm for their policy or confidence in their leaders but from a general determination to castigate the Conservatives. As soon as they assume office their troubles will begin, as the party obviously still lacks a coherent mind about several of the most fundamental problems of the Dominion.

The Tragic Era

By Claude G. Bowers

Following are excerpts from "The Tragic Era" by Claude G. Bowers reprinted by permission of the publishers, Houghton Mifflin Co.

After The War.

NO ONE visiting Washington immediately after the war would have carried away memories of physical beauty. The overgrown village of the 50's had not improved under the rough usage of the war, and while Henry Adams thought it "unchanged," with nothing that "betrayed growth," he was probably thinking of the inner social circles, for the four-year struggle had left its marks. The streets were streaks of mud, and at the second Lincoln inauguration a diplomat's carriage had been mired to the hub on F street, and curious crowds had amused themselves by watching the dignitary being carried, with all his gold lace, to safety in the arms of a servant.

The influx of population due to war had not diminished, and, for a time, there was a dearth of houses and rooms, but quite soon all this was changed. There was a building boom, and the rich, finding the Capital entertaining, began the construction of pretentious homes. By the early 70's there was an air of smartness to the town.

• • • •

IN FRONT of the Willard, a long row of hacks with black drivers. Up and down the Avenue, after it was paved, a great parade of fine equipages, for fashion had a weakness for such display. A favorite drive was out to the park of the Soldiers' Home, from which one could look down upon the town; another to Rock Creek Park, "as wild as the Rocky Mountains," where "here and there a Negro log cabin alone disturbed the dogwood and the judas tree and the laurel." Ugly as was the sprawling town, there was charm enough in its environs, and Henry Adams thought that "the Potomac and its tributaries squandered beauty." Beauty, however, was less sought than entertainment by the official sojourners and the tourists, and of this there was enough. The streets were studded thick with barrooms, for it was a day of heavy drinking, and there had been times when "the whole House was drunk."

Gambling was the prevailing vice, and he who would tempt fortune had not far to go. At the close of the war, more than a hundred gambling houses flourished, and five years later there were but 17. The most exclusive of these, within a stone's throw of the Willard, catered only to the rich and prominent, and the stranger was turned away at the door. So thriving was the business of John Chamberlin with Senators and Congressmen that, in 1873, he acquired the former British Legation on Connecticut avenue, at I and Seventeenth streets, at a cost of $150,000.

• • • •

IF THE tourist cat could not look at the kings at Chamberlin's, he could, if willing to pay the price, see them all in the famous restaurant of John Welcker, sacred still to the memory of statesmen sleeping in the dust. The lobbyists made it their headquarters, close to the wine-cellars and the hearts of the Nation's lawmakers; and for ten years much of American history was made within the paneled walls. Here the lobbyist mellowed the hard heart of the Senator, the lover met his mistress, the friends of Chase plotted against Lincoln, the radicals against Johnson, the Credit Mobilier conspirators against the Treasury.

And there, too, was the restaurant of Sam Ward, a veritable gentleman of the world, grand master in the management of a dinner, a genius in cuisine, a connoisseur in wines, and a famous raconteur, who exchanged confidences with Senators, and remained the soul of discretion.

AMONG the hotels, that of Wormley at H and Fifteenth streets, was most exclusive, favoring family patronage and entertaining politicians like Colfax, statesmen like Caleb Cushing, and the diplomatic set. The Marquis and Mme. de Noailles, and Senor and Mme. Flores lived here and entertained. But the Willard was most imposing, the new Ebbitt was to have its day, and the National, where Clay had died, still drew its full quota of public men.

This was the season that opened the era of extravagance which was to have its tragedies. Senator Zack Chandler startled the town, forgetful of the golden 50's by the prodigality of his entertainments. His imposing house on H street blazed with light from top to bottom many times that winter. The habitues of the modest brick houses on I and K streets, with their plate glass windows and shining doorsteps, donned their pink and blue dresses and pale gloves and sedately went to Grant's receptions as of old, but there was more of the mob spirit in society, and this prevailed.

What with gambling, drinking, dining at Welcker's driving, entertaining, dressing, the budget of many a household failed to show a balance.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Gracie Allen and Mr. Hoover.

Reporter—Miss Allen, this is Mr. Hoover.

Gracie—Oh, I remember! I saw him in "As Thousands Cheer." He was awfully good.

Reporter—Mr. Hoover, this is Gracie Allen.

Mr. Hoover—I'm glad to know you, Miss Allen. Are you one of my constituents?

• • • •

Reporter—Mr. Hoover was once President of the United States.

Gracie—Oh, that one! Ain't it funny how I never remember a face? How do you like not being President, Mr. Hoover?

Mr. Hoover—I rather enjoy it.

Gracie—So do I. All my family like not being President. My father is so crazy about not being President that he has decided to run for it in the next election.

Mr. Hoover—Why?

Gracie—So he can be sure he will not be President.

(The reporters decide to steer Gracie away for her health and interview her separately. In the rush they ask her the question they intended to ask Mr. Hoover.)

Q. Do you hold that American liberties are seriously menaced by what is going on in Washington?

A. I dunno. When my train came through it was raining and I couldn't see out the windows.

Q. You are opposed, are you not, to any tinkering with the Constitution?

A. If you gotta good constitution you should let it alone. My sister had a fine constitution until she started on a banana and milk diet to take off weight.

Q. What are your views on the horse and buggy days?

A. I think we are buggy enough and I wouldn't know what to do with a horse if I caught one.

Q. You don't catch horses.

A. The doctor said the same thing about hay fever.

Night Owls Find Bevies of Girls, Tasty Drinks

Catherine Cunningham Off to Study Opening of New Show.

By Chanticleer.

Here and there about the town: Catherine Cunningham, chief publicity tom-tom beater at the Willard Hotel, has packed the Cunningham bags and is off for the Bedford Springs Hotel. For a vacation, you think. Huh huh, not at all. She's going down there to put the Cunningham head between the Cunningham hands * * * and stare off into the hills * * * and map out a grand opening for the Bamboo Room which is scheduled before very long now. And I know a lot of folks who will approve of that opening, too.

* * * *

Col. Henderson is providing the gentlemen of the Milt Davis Band at Hamilton's Rainbow Room with something to think about. The colonel is the fellow who thinks up those devilish I. Q. lists for the young cadets at the Naval Academy. He gathers the band about him and tells an apparently innocuous story of a man who worked hard all day, but didn't get a smudge on his face, but who nevertheless washed his face with great enthusiasm—and for good reason. Now, asks the colonel of the gentlemen of the band, why did the workman do that? Well, Milt told me the answer, but I'm not going to spoil it for you. If you can't figure it out, ask Maestro Davis.

* * * *

* * * *

Just by way of returning the compliment . . . Paul, the Habana's genial host in Guy Scott's absence . . . and another Habanan went to the Lotus for luncheon the day following the Koons-Seidler bonfire. It was freely rumored that they were scouting the rest of the Seidler sisters—there being four of them in all and each as comely as her sisters.

After 2 in the morning the Levy brothers down at the Hangar Club sit back and watch the lights flicker out on the water . . . and the Hangar Club draws guests from all the night spots in town. They do gather in from all over the city and with that cool wind whipping across the airport, the Hangar Club roof is about the coolest early morning rendezvous south of Labrador. The one thing missing this week is Valentine, the ventroloquist, and Chico, the dummy. They're on the stage bill with "Going Native" for the nonce, as it were.

Evey band has its comedian . . . and with Al Barkley and the New Yorkers, at Maryland Club Gardens, it's a young man named Snyder who keeps the saxophones and trumpets in good humor. But it has earned the nickname of "Itchy," which isn't anything to write home to mother and the girls about. "Itchy" is the last word in xylophoning . . . and when he romps over those little slats of hardwood the band is among the first to pay respect to a real artist. "Itchy" also is the baby of the New Yorkers. He's an old gentleman of 19 now.

Incidentally, the Hamilton's Rainbow Room announces a minimum charge of $1 for Saturday nights only. That would mean, no doubt, that the crowds are catching up and passing the Rainbow Room's square footage. Tea dancing between 5 and 7 also is scheduled in the future for Saturday afternoon.

* * * *

That horse "Pluto" now appearing at the Shoreham Terrace just completed a ten-weeks' engagement at the Steel Pier in Atlantic City . . . and there's many a hoofer and torch singer who would be envious of that record! . . . The demand for "Isle of Capri" continues . . . so much so that Barnee has made a brand-new arrangement for his Maxim Lowe Orchestra.

The war of the juleps resulted in a draw. It started when Harriet of the Mayflower lounge said to Teddy of the Mayflower lounge: "Paul, of the Club Habana, is boasting that Sebastian makes the best julep in town." That resulted in a challenge. "We'll invite Paul over for one of our prize juleps—and then we'll go over to the Club Habana and have one of Sebastian's." And that's what happened. But what with Teddy and Paul being friends of long standing the challenge merely ended with each talking through his beard very polite like . . . and each declaring the julep was positively 50-50.

Circus Slated At Scout Camp On Chesapeake

Water Carnival Also Will Feature Extra 2 Weeks at Roosevelt Site.

A Boy Scout circus, with all the thrills of the big top, animals, side shows, acrobats, a band and a parade, will feature the extra two weeks at Camp Roosevelt on the Chesapeake. Another aquatic day and water carnival will also be staged and a water pageant in the evening with illuminated floats.

Decision to keep the camp open for an additional two weeks, until September 2, came as a result of the cancellation of the National Jamboree and provides an opportunity for the Washington Jamboree contingent to hold a special activity together. The extra period also takes care of Scouts who have been attending summer school.

A life guard demonstration is scheduled Sunday at 4:15 p. m. A week later, Sunday, August 25, another waterfront show will include canoe, rowboat and sailboat demonstrations.

The second annual banquet at the camp, which was to have been held tomorrow, August 17, has been postponed until Saturday evening, August 31. The camp now has a splendid organ for vesper services, but still needs a piano.

Physical examinations for camp attendance will be given next Thursday evening at Scout headquarters, 1018 Vermont avenue.

Camp Wilson at Burnt Mills, Md., still has a month to run and with plenty of good water in the swimming pool it looks like a big 30 days. The court of honor to be held there Saturday, September 14, will be the last before the court of award at Powell Junior High on September 21.

Guide training is continuing in spite of the jamboree cancellation, and examinations are being held each Thursday at Scout headquarters. When the guides pass the tests with marks of 70 per cent or better they are officially enrolled as members of the Washington Guide Corps, and as such, are eligible for special Scout work.

The first special assignment for the Washington Guide Corps will be to convey the pony express riders to the White House next Thursday. One hundred guides and two horsemen have been requested.

Suspects in Bank Robbery Still Held

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 15.—The two men brought here from West Virginia as suspects in the recent Amelia Bank robbery are still lodged in the Henrico Jail, Capt. H. B. Nichols, of the State police, said today.

The men, Luther C. Doggs and Frank Hogan, both of Louisiana, will be taken to Amelia as soon as arrangements are made with authorities for questioning them there, Capt. Nicholas said. They were brought to Henrico Jail here Tuesday night by Capt. Nicholas and Officer Groth after their arrest by West Virginia authorities.

Broadway + + By Ed. Sullivan

The Furious Forties.

New York, Aug. 15.

Sufficient unto itself is that strip of Forty-sixth street, which runs from Broadway to the elevated tracks on Sixth avenue . . . It has a school in which the children of the Furious Forties can learn their A, B, C's; it has a church in which they learn how to translate the alphabetical lessons into one word: charity . . . it has restaurants, hotels, clothing stores, barber shops, and when you pass along the block, you hear the staccato beat of chorines rehearsing their routines in badly ventilated rehearsal halls . . . it has, near Sixth avenue, employment agencies where men search with tired eyes for bulletins that may mean a job to them . . . It is the headquarters of Variety, greatest of theatrical trade papers, which sits in judgment on all the biggies and smallies of the movies and stage and radio, a jury of cold type.

* * * *

In the middle of this noisy, colorful block, gather each day the Battalions of Hope, the sidewalk horse players . . . These are the most forlorn of the race track polyglots . . . You see them, their faces drawn and taut, standing on the sidewalks scanning the racing sheets with feverish intensity . . . Each horse listed in the racing sheets carries a promise of sudden wealth, a golden windfall to these hard-eyed men . . . The nose of one horse, stuck ahead of the others, is unimportant in the general scheme of things, but to these sidewalk betters there is nothing so tremulously important . . . What if the world rocks on its axis, shaken by internal convulsions of mighty nations? The horse players of Forty-sixth street care little about Ethiopia, unless it suggests a hunch bet in the fifth at Saratoga . . . The most affluent of these betters has $10 in his pocket . . . By nightfall, it may have become five times that amount through the alchemy of the track . . . By nightfall, it may have vanished completely, but the horse player, with a cast in his eye, can only visualize a big winning.

* * * *

Not for these W. Forty-Sixth Street plungers is the actual thrill of the race . . . They hear no bugle calling the jockeys to their saddles, they never see the shade trees that make Saratoga so lovely, not for them the colorful parade to the post, the luxury of grandstand seats . . . Shirtless and sleeveless, they stand in the smudgy heat of Forty-Sixth Street, moving now and then when a policeman appears on the horizon, moving more frequently to permit garbage wagons and trucks to remove or deposit restaurant orders . . . The blaze of hope in their hearts hides all of this dingy environment from them, however . . . They rush to stuffy, steaming telephone booths and stand there patiently to get the race results . . . Sometimes one of them comes out beaming, the lines in his face ironed out magically by the thrill of a winner . . . Too often they return from their telephone booths with a stricken look on their faces, a glazed expression in their eyes, like a fighter who has been badly hurt by a right hand exploding in the pit of his stomach.

* * * *

It is a fascinating street . . . Between shows, actors appear in the backstage windows and door of Loew's State, their makeup showing up bronze and startling in the sunlight . . . In the last few weeks, actors and layoffs have gathered at the stage door here to learn from their comrades how goes the vaudeville battle . . . The Capitol, the Metropolitan, Loew's Jersey City and Loew's Orpheum have all dropped vaudeville or will drop it soon . . . The actors feel a sudden tightening of their throats, a sudden feeling of panic . . . Where do we go from here, they seem to ask each other . . . They might better ask the question of Nick Schenck, head of the vast M-G-M. empire of entertainment, who comes down the block with Charlie Moscowitz . . . "Thought I read you were sick, Mr. Schenck," hails one of the headliners, braver than the rest . . . Schenck laughs pleasantly . . . "The boys are having their little joke."

* * * *

Only gay note on the block is sounded by the one person who should be dour . . . Jack Inglis, legless restaurateur of the block, who once was a musical comedy player, is the cheeriest member of this Forty-sixth street cast . . . Inglis, sitting behind the cash register of his modest little place, bangs a cowhorn and hands these cards to his patrons: "Don't ask me to dance" . . . I remember the night we threw a benefit for him at one of the local theaters . . . Jim Barton paid Inglis a beautiful tribute and they rolled him out in a wheel chair to acknowledge Barton's laudation . . . "Jim, you haven't left me a leg to stand on," said Inglis, and brought down the house.

* * * *

Near Sixth is the famous Hannibal Restaurant . . . Ed Wittmer, bespectacled, is the owner . . . Jeff Brophy, 340-pounder, is the manager . . . To this place come the politicians of the town, the actors, the press agents and those of the sidewalk horse players who cash a big bet . . . Brophy rarely sees onstage the actors who are his patrons . . . He can't find a theater with seats wide enough to accommodate his great bulk . . . That is his favorite topic, and he will prove, by figures, that a theater which would build a section of seats for fat men and women would find it commercially advantageous . . . So far, no manager has listened to him . . . Theaters will continue to believe, until evidence to the contrary is adduced, that two slim people at 65 cents apiece, are commercially preferable to one fat man . . . but the discussion of such a matter, trivial as it may seem, is vastly important on W. 46th Street, where a man can speak weightily on light matters and yet gain a respectful hearing . . . Nothing is trivial on 46th street except death and taxes.

"The 39 Steps" Pace Off the Approximate Distance This Side of Perfect Job!

British Screen Play Presents Odd Contrasts

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE 39 STEPS." Gaumont British picturization of a novel by John Buchan, adapted to the screen by Charles Bennett, with dialogue by Ian Hay, co-featuring Robert Donat and Madeleine Carroll, with Lucie Mannheim, Godfrey Tearle, Peggy Ashcroft, John Laurie, Helen Haye, and Wylie Watson. Directed by Alfred Hitchcock. Reviewed Wednesday afternoon. ....

It would be the off-hand judgment of this column that "The 39 Steps" mark about the distance this Gaumont British production lacks of being a sure-fire screen hit.

It boasts a bit of novelty, to be sure, in the manner of its plot construction, and has some very amusing dialogue sandwiched in between its slight illogical dramatic climaxes, but at times it resorts to those glaringly transparent theatrical devices—like the girl hanging over the balustrade listening to the revelatory remarks of the yarn's arch-plotters in a small Scottish inn where the second-floor landing is almost on eye-level with the lower floor—that force it to appear something less than an eager and earnest effort to record actuality through the shutters of the camera.

A great deal of its way, "The 39 Steps" is palpably dramatic pabulum contrived for those indiscriminate palates that care not what they swallow and, whatever it is, enjoy it!

There are, of course, several considerations wholly on the side of the picture's worth. Foremost among these would be the inescapable fact that Robert Donat is one of the cinema's handsomest young practitioners and that Madeleine Carroll is a British blonde who has several claims to a place among the elect of the flicker favorities.

Some Lively Dialogue.

Mr. Donat and Miss Carroll have some sprightly and intensely amusing dialogue, which one is tempted to suppose emanated from the pen of Ian Hay, and which they execute in splendid fashion while hand-cuffed to each other as one of the whimsical results of the deep-laid plans of a band of international "secret agents" who feel no aversion whatever to knifing a perfect lady in the back, if that suits their schemes best.

Some such episode seems to suit their schemes that way and that is why Mr. Donat, through much of the film's footage, is a murder suspect—wholly innocent, as goes without saying.

The whole thing hinges, it should be divulged at this point, upon a brave attempt to prevent important airplane secrets from getting out of England through the machinations of a pretty shrewd bunch of high-priced hoodlums, who utilize the astounding memory of a vaudeville actor, known as "Mr. Memory," in the London halls to recite to them in response to "audience questions" the facts they want to know.

This is where the second shooting of the film comes off and things get into a pretty parlous state, what with the "master mind" doing a John Wilkes Booth to the stage, and one thing and another.

A great deal of "The 39 Steps" devotes itself to miraculous escapes from moving trains, across the moors of Scotland and under waterfalls that look none too protective, and a little too much seems to be left to that long arm of coincidence to make this one for the addicted logicians.

Is Not Closely Knit.

But there is a deal of comedy, as has been intimated, in this latest of the Gaumont British features to reach the local screen, and there are two uncommonly fine performances by Mr. Donat and Miss Carroll. Godfrey Tearle and Lucie Mannheim contribute further reasons for liking this effort to get out of the rut in the matter of mystery plays, but still it doesn't hang together any too well.

Foremost among the supplementary features of the bill is "The March of Time," which goes at some length into the preparations by the United States Government to withstand invasion by a foreign foe—if any; political and social disturbances in France, and the case of Father Coughlin, stormy petrel of the Catholic faith whose National Union for Social Justice has become a potent factor in American politics, thanks to the far-reaching effects of the radio.

Other auxiliaries of a bill that falls only a little short of the high standard G-B has set in its most recent feature releases include a passably amusing natural color cartoon comedy, "The Parrotville Post-office," and the Pathe News, which, probably out of consideration for the superior excellence of "The March of Time," is chopped down to no more than a shadow of its former self.

But that Robert Donat certainly is a handsome devil—and Miss Carroll is not so hard to take, either.

Since we have been chattering more or less about Mr. Meakin's RKO-Keith's Theater, it might be permissible to remark that the trailer shots of Miss Katharine Hepburn in the RKO-Radio transcription into celluloid of my fellow-Hoosier, Booth Tarkington's "Alice Adams," give promise of a first-class hit on the part of this temperamental young woman. Fred MacMurray is the last lad in the world I should have nominated to play opposite her—especially after his "Men Without Names"—but so far as one is able to judge from the quick flashes of which the trailer is made up, Fred does all right for himself and doesn't do Miss Hepburn any harm, either.

Tonight, beginning at approximately 11 by the clock, the Loew executives are tossing an "Auld Lang Syne" party for the cast and chorus of "Going Native," the third of the annual local-talent revues staged at Loew's Fox in August.

The postaltelegraph from Carter Barron, Eastern division manager for Loew's, Inc., runs something like this—verbatim, as a matter of fact: "'Auld Lang Syne' will be the guiding spirit of a farewell party for 'Going Native' members backstage at the Fox Thursday night at 11. Since you are such an integral part of this year's revue won't you and yours join in this festive farewell? Regards."

A Libelous Compliment.

Sure I will.

And if anybody has been curious to know of my personal reaction to the libelous caricature of your proud reporter concocted by that master satirist, Gene Ford, I am only to happy to report that I already have filed suit against Mr. Ford, Mr. Barron, Loew's Inc., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck for the attack on a guileless nature embodied in their attempt to make me out a highbrow!

I have already told them to their faces how I feel about it and I now take pleasure in making public that the whole scandalous business was swell!

However, I still make the reservation that if I look like that—from the neck up only, you understand—I'm sorry.

Mary Quimby does too well by the rest of me, which, of course, is her!

Utter Chagrin Note.

My word, what phone calls, upbraidings, etceteras came my way yistiddy after Wednesday's last line! You'd be surprised.

Has everybody in the world read Mr. Twain's Rabelaisian classic, "1620"?

They Discover a Clew at Last!

With the aid of the "V-8" opera glasses, Robert Donat and Madeleine Carroll, leading characters in "The 39 Steps," which opened a week's engagement at RKO-Keith's Theater yesterday, find the key to the thrilling chase they have been on looking to the apprehension of a clever band of international spies. A London music hall, of all places, was where one of the box occupants gave himself away. This is Mr. Donat's first screen appearance since he was flashed upon the same silver sheet, in "The Count of Monte Cristo," a year ago next month.

With Clark Gable, Jean Harlow and Wallace Beery in the pivotal roles, supported by Lewis S. Stone, Robert Benchley, Rosalind Russell, Dudley Digges, C. Aubrey Smith and Edward Brophy, "China Seas," opening a week's engagement on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater tomorrow, may be relied upon to supply fast-moving and tumultuous entertainment. Set among the hair-raising exploits on one of the world's roughest frontiers, "China Seas" presents an exciting panorama of rough weather, piracy and romance aboard an ocean liner. Thanks to Mr. Benchley's adroit clowning, there is also a deal of comedy in the picture. The bill will be augmented by abbreviated camera subjects and a new issue of the Metrotone News.

"Page Miss Glory," in which the stellar role is played by Marion Davies, with Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien, Frank McHugh and others of note in support, comes to the screen at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater tomorrow for a week's engagement. Headlining the vaudeville portion of the bill will be Lee Sims and Ilona Bailey, two of radio's cleverest tunesters. Other acts will be presented by Harris, Claire and Shannon, dancers; the agile Ghezzis and, as an extra added attraction, Rudy Vallee's latest protege, Al Bernie, who gives vigorous impressions of those in the public eye. The presentation of "Page Miss Glory" on the screen marks the world premiere of this picture as one of the Warners' "midsummer jubilee hits."

George Raft and Alice Faye are the co-stars of "Every Night at Eight," the new screen feature to be presented for the week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Fox Theater. This is the first utilization that has been made by the cinema of the new fad of radio amateur talent nights. Frances Langford, the Three Radio Rogues, Patsy Kelly, Walter Catlett and that eminent dialectician, Herman Bing, are among those who appear importantly in the stars' support. The stage bill will be headlined by the young barytone, Sid Gary, and will include turns by Moore and Revel, jesters of the dance; Benny Ross and Maxine Stone, in songs, comedy and dance, and the Ambassadors, instrumentalists. The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's orchestral contributions will round out the bill.

Boris Karloff is said to be twice as terrifying in "The Black Room" as he has ever appeared heretofore, because in this picture coming to the screen of the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow he plays a dual role. Mr. Karloff is spendidly supported in his newest film by Marian Marsh, Robert Allen, the disappointed lover of Grace Moore, in "Love Me Forever;" Katherine De Mille and Thurston Hall, one of the cinema's veterans. The bill at the Met will be completed by short sound subjects and a full 15-minute newsreel, setting forth the important world events of the week.

Shirley Temple will revive downtown interest in her latest Fox film, "Curly Top," on the screen of Loew's Columbia Theater, beginning tomorrow. In this familiar story of the orphanage and the home of a helpful young millionaire, the tiny star is supported by John Boles, Rochelle Hudson, Arthur Treacher and numerous others whose contributions to an amusing concoction are generous. Shirley, Boles and Miss Hudson all have songs to sing during the action of the play. Short-reel subjects and news events will complete the entertainment.

It is one of the boasts of Glen Echo Park that there are neither "dog days" nor "dog nights" out in the cooling breezes of its 40-acre wooded highland along the edge of the Potomac. A majority of the rides provided among the 50-odd attractions in full midsummer operation are in themselves breeze-makers. Then there is the Crystal Pool, one of the best equipped in the country, the Spanish Garden ballroom and the ample picnic groves—all planned to mitigate the discomforts of high city temperatures and depressing humidity.

Postlude

National Symphony Orchestra in tenth summer concert at the Potomac Watergate. Burle Marx, conductor; Harrison Christian, barytone soloist. Program: Overture to "Euryanthe" (Weber), Symphony in C Minor (Beethoven), "Suite Infantil" (Juan Jose Castro), "Bebe s'endort" (Henrique Oswald), "La Grande Paque Russe" (Rimski-Korsakov), "Eri tu" from "Un Ballo in Maschera" (Verdi), Prologue to "Pagliacci" (Leoncavallo), "Suite Brasileira" (Francisco Mignone), overture to "Die Fledermaus" (Strauss).

Last night's concert showed no diminution in the interest with which Washingtonians are enjoying their first opportunity to hear orchestral music in the open air. Such continuous evidence of appreciation must gratify those who had the initiative and the courage to institute the summer series. No doubt can remain that the "Sunset Symphonies" have passed the experimental stage with a success beyond expectations, and that they will hereafter have a permanent place in the Capital's musical life.

Whatever dreams Carl Maria von Weber may have had about his romantic opera, "Euryanthe," he could not have foreseen that its ultimate fate would be to supply a popular overture for symphonic concerts more than a century after his death. Yet its inherent dramatic quality is such that its vitality is assured for another century to come, unless musical taste undergoes some unpredictable change. Last night it served most acceptably its frequent functions as introducer of a miscellaneous program.

The zest with which the musicians started their evening's work lost something of its keenness in Beethoven's fifth symphony, unless the acoustics played tricks with one's ears. Energetic as Earle Marx's reading was, a considerable amount of Beethovenian essence was missing. This was particularly noticeable in those passages, such as the transitional bridge from the scherzo to the finals, in which a mysterious hush, almost an ominous foreboding, should fall upon the instruments.

After the intermission, Mr. Marx presented two novelties of merit from South America. Castro's "Suite Infantil," based on children's songs, proved to be a cleverly orchestrated work with an obvious affinity to Debussy's "Coin d'Enfanta." Yet the scoring has nothing Debussyan about it, pertaining rather to the ironic manner of Ravel. Oswald's "Baby Goes to Sleep" is a lullaby of winsome quality, delicate and imaginative.

From this charming and slumberous mood the change was abrupt to the parade and pomp of Rimski-Korsakov's "Russian Easter," with its undercurrent of devotional feeling. And the note of intensity persisted through the two operatic excerpts sung by Harrison Christian. Endowed with a robust voice of firm timbre in the middle and lower registers, the soloist was dramatically effective at many moments. But his high tones are constrained and pale, and the climax of Tonio's monologue fell short of sonority.

Another very interesting novelty was Mignone's "Brazilian Suite," abounding in native rhythms and themes. The composer scores with certainty in the choice of instrumental color, and his dynamic effects are excellently calculated.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief Of Pain

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and waste out of the blood. If they don't pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing.

If you have trouble with frequent bladder passages with scanty amount, which often smart and burn, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

Don't wait for serious trouble. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS—which have been used successfully for over 40 years by millions of people. They give happy relief and will help flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get DOAN'S PILLS.

Cuban Embassy Scene Of Brilliant Reception

The Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson y de Jauregui, entertained late yesterday afternoon at a reception at the embassy on Sixteenth street, honoring the members of the official commission of the Social Economic League of Cuba, who have been in the Capital for the last week and who have been honored at an interesting series of informal affairs.

The reception yesterday was one of the more colorful of the summer season. Despite the enervating heat which had settled over the city for several days, many members of diplomatic and official circles drifted in during the afternoon. Deep red gladioli in low baskets were a lovely contrast against the cool, green walls and soft green and rose draperies. The same flowers, flanked by tall matching tapers, were on the serving table.

Ambassador Receives.

The ambassador was in the charming hall in front of the entrance to the drawing rooms and dining room to receive his guests and with him was his eldest daughter, Senorita Zoe Patterson, in a royal blue crepe afternoon gown made on simple lines with silver belt and a silver calla lily on her shoulder which was an effective contrast to her very dark hair. Alongside of her was Senor Jose Manuel Casanova, president of the Social Economic Union of Cuba, who will leave Washington late this evening with other members of the commission to return to Cuba. The ambassador's other daughter, Senorita Olga Patterson, who wore an afternoon gown of black and white print with a white collar and cuffs trimmed with emerald green, was a charming hostess, going from room to room to see the guests were receiving cool refreshments, of which there were many in the dining room as well as delicious sandwiches of every variety.

Among those who were glimpsed were the Ambassador of Spain, Senor Don Luis Calderon, who recently returned from a few days in Canada; the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. de Munir, who are remaining in the Capital during the summer; the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera, the latter wore a gown of beige crepe with a large white straw hat trimmed with a band of brown; the Minister of Bolivia, Senor Dr. Don Enrique Finot; the Minister of The Netherlands, Jonkheer H. M. Haersma de With; Senora de DeBayle, wife of the Charge d'Affairs of Nicaragua, chose for the afternoon a cool white crepe frock with a white felt hat and white accessories; the director general of the Pan American Union, Dr. Leo S. Rowe; the Charge d'Affaires of Czechoslovakia, Mr. Otakar Kabelac; the First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Fuentes, the latter wore a gown of salmon pink with a large hat of the same shade.

Belgian Attache Attends.

Others in the dining room who were partaking of the iced tea or a water ice were the Attache of the Belgian Embassy and Mme. Walravens, the latter wearing dark blue and white print with a picture hat of French blue felt and dark blue accessories. M. and Mme. Walravens will leave Washington for Cape May, where they will spend the week-end as the guests of Capt. Richard M. Cutts, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Cutts. Senora de Arguello, of Nicaragua, wore a charming light blue frock with a dark blue hat, and her daughter, Senorita Chita Arguello, wore a chalk-pink silk frock with a Dubonnet scarf with white polka dots and a natural color straw hat with a band to match the scarf. Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, also were present. The former wore a gown of black and white print with a large white felt hat, and Miss Bloom wore a frock of pink with a small hat to match.

Also there was Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, who wore a very smart ensemble of dark brown and bade many of her friends good-by for the remainder of the summer, as she expects to leave the Capital the middle of next week for Massachusetts. Mrs. Campbell Prichet looked very attractive in a red and white printed frock with a large cartwheel hat of bright red straw.

Miss Keeney in Green.

Her niece, Miss Natalie Keeney, wore a cool pale green frock with a brown lace hat and brown accessories. Miss Marian Trumbull, who will leave Washington in a day or two for Wood's Hole, Mass., for several weeks' visit, wore a very chic two-piece frock, the skirt of white and the blouse of white printed with small figures of black and yellow, and with this she wore a large white felt hat. Miss Marjorie Talman wore a black and white printed gown with a sailor hat.

An interesting addition to the tea yesterday afternoon was Senorita Rebeca Trucco, daughter of the Ambassador of Chile, who is spending a few days in Washington at the Cuban Embassy, having come from Harper's Ferry, W. Va. Senorita Trucco picked for the occasion a smart, white crepe gown with white accessories. Mrs. Crosby Miller, of Warrenton, Va., who motored to the Capital for the reception, wore a smart white crepe frock with a white straw hat trimmed with navy blue. Mr. William K. Ryan also was there, as was Mr. William P. MacCracken, jr., Mr. John Caswell and the Secretary of the Chilean Embassy, Senor Don Mario Rodriquez.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 15.—The Procession of the Centuries, a colorful and romantic portrayal of the history of Mount Desert, is to be presented here tomorrow as one of the highlights of Summer Visitors' Day.

Among the socially prominent residents of the summer colony who will take part in the pageant is Miss Moira Archbold, daughter of Mrs. Anne Archbold, of Washington.

More than 250 summer colonists will participate in presenting the 11 historic episodes of Mount Desert dating from 1604 to the present. The pageant is being directed by Leighton Rollins and Mrs. John DeWitt Peltz, former president of the New York Junior League.

Stressing the fact that each episode centers around the arrival of visitors to the island, Mrs. Peltz revealed that even the Indians of the early days were not permanent residents, merely visiting the island to plant and harvest crops and to fish and hunt. The first episode in the procession, in which Miss Archbold will take part, will depict the Abenakis, the island's first visitors who predated the arrival of the whites by many centuries and who named the place Pemetic, meaning "that which is at the head," a name still given to one of the Mount Desert mountains.

The second episode to be presented deals with the arrival of the first white man to set foot on Mount Desert, the daring and romantic Samuel Champlain, who visited here in 1604, claiming all of the surrounding territory for France and who gave to the island the name it still bears.

In contrast to the arrival of Champlain and his colorfully dressed followers, the third episode will portray the landing of the soberly attired Jesuits, who landed here in 1613 to convert the Indians under the leadership of Asticou, the Abenaki sagamore.

Antoine de la Mothe Cadillac and his wife, who were granted all rights to Mount Desert by Louis XIV of France in 1688, will be featured in the fourth episode of the procession. Cadillac, whose name is perpetuated by the majestic mountain named in his honor, was instrumental in mapping and recording watercourse soundings during his sojourn here which were of great assistance to sailors of the period.

The sixth episode to be presented deals with the separation of Maine and Massachusetts in 1820, featuring William King, Maine's first governor and author of its constitution.

Of special interest will be the seventh episode, which will show the arrival of the first party of summer visitors ever to visit the island. Led by Charles Tracy in 1855, his 26 guests from Boston and New York originated the popularity of Mount Desert as a summer colony.

Episode ten will portary a picnic of the 80's depicting the buckboards and other typical vehicles of the period. The final tableau will show the sports and costumes in vogue on Mount Desert in the period from 1900 to 1935.

All the participants in the Procession of the Centuries will be costumed in the authentic dress of the period which they represent, over 250 costumes having been secured by Elsa Frame, famous theatrical designer and costumer, who is summering here and who has volunteered her services for the occasion.

Stephen Cook, of New York, a descendant of Charles Tracy, first Mount Desert "rusticator," will be another summer resident who will portray the character of an ancestor.

Included in the list of entertainers for the initial portion of the program are Ed. Wynn, Bill Cunningham, Henry Morgenthau, Walter Damrosch, Dorothy Robbins, Doris Doe, Carmele Ponselle, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Kenneth Roberts, George Wickersham, Madam Rose Zulalian, Mitzie Green, Mary Rogers, Owen Davis, Keenan Wynn, Grace George, Arthur Byron, Edith Barrett, William A. Brady and others.

The wedding of Miss Ruth Eleanor Beach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Beach, of 5231 Conduit road, and Mr. Robert Fest, son of Master Sergt and Mrs. Grover C. Orr, of Fort Myer, Va., will be solemnized at 4 p. m. tomorrow in the post chapel at Fort Myer, with Chaplain Ralph C. Deibert officiating.

The bride will have as her attendants Miss Jeanette Whitman, of Washington, as maid of honor, and Miss Doris Moulton, of Fort Myer, and Miss Elsie Breedon, of Washington, as bridesmaids.

Mr. Fest will have as best man, Mr. Emil Becker, of Clarendon, Va., and the ushers will be James Jenkins, of Radnor Heights, Va., and Joel Hubbard, of Ballston, Va.

Immediately after the ceremony there will be a reception for the family at the quarters of Sergt. and Mrs. Orr, at Fort Myer. The bridal couple will then sail down the Potomac to Virginia Beach, where they will spend a brief honeymoon, after which they will make their home at 1910 North Adams street, Park Lane, Va.

The ceremony will be preceded by an organ recital by Private George Singleton, of the Third Cavalry Band, Fort Myer.

Prize Contest Of Riders Set For Tomorrow

Show at Equitation Field in Park to Include Army Performers.

One of the outstanding horse shows of the summer here will be the meet at the Riding and Hunt Club tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock on the equitation field adjoining the beautiful Meadowbrook Saddle Club, in Rock Creek Park, at Chevy Chase, Md.

Army and civilian riders, including a number from the society set, have been schooling their mounts in intensive fashion for two weeks and they are ready for the program of ten tests.

Among the performers who will represent the Army will be the Fort Myer Horse Show Team, which will enter several horses from the string which has represented the United States Army in international contests at the World's Fair, Madison Square Garden and other shows.

The horses will be shown under the capable handling of Capt. Marion Carson, Lieut. F. S. Henry, Lieut. W. G. Wyman and other officers from the Virginia garrison. It is expected that Col. Kenyon A. Joyce, commandant of the fort and one of the ablest riders in the service, will take part.

Maj. Charles B. Lyman, of 4425 Volta place, and Mrs. Lyman also will compete. They will exhibit Mavi Girl and Little John, two horses new to Capital enthusiasts. They will be entered in eight events and make a serious bid for the open jumping and hunter championships, as well as the sterling silver trophies.

Mr. Jack Allen is chairman of the show. The program was arranged by Col. Charles L. Scott and Mr. Fenton Fadeley.

Richardson Home Leased by Lackeys

Admiral and Mrs. H. E. Lackey have leased the home of Rear Admiral and Mrs. James O. Richardson at 2708 Thirty-fifth street northwest during the extended absence of the latter on the West Coast.

Mrs. Richardson will leave tomorrow to join Admiral Richardson in Bremerton, Wash., for two weeks and then will go to Long Beach, Calif., where she will make her home. Admiral Richardson, who has been succeeded by Capt. H. E. Kimmel as budget officer, is now on duty on the U. S. S. San Francisco.

Larsons on Visit.

Dean and Mrs. L. J. Larson, of the Forest Lake Academy, in Maitland, Fla., are guests at the Washington Sanitarium, and are visiting friends in Takoma Park. Dean Larson, who is a teacher of expression, gave a program at the sanitarium Tuesday evening.

Miss Doudge, Mr. Hibbard Are Married

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., Aug. 15.—The wedding of Miss Grace Hurd Douge, daughter of the late Barton T. Doudge and Mrs. Doudge, of Paradise, Warrenton, and James M. Hibbard, son of the late James Monrbe Hibbard and Mrs. Hibbard, of Melrose Castle, Casanova, took place this afternoon. The Rev. Paul D. Bowden, of St. James Episcopal Church, performed the ceremony. Only the immediate families of the couple were present.

Miss Doudge was given in marriage by her mother. She wore her mother's wedding gown of old lace, with a tulle veil and orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. She was unattended.

Mr. William Worth Sprague, of Warrenton and Washington, was best man.

The ceremony took place in the drawing room of Paradise, one of the lovely estates for which the Warrenton section is noted. It is owned by Mrs. James Cornell Biddle and has been rented by Mrs. Doudge and her daughter, Mrs. Henri de Heller, of Switzerland and Egypt, for the summer. Mr. de Heller joined Mrs. de Heller for the wedding. Mr. T. William Street, organist of St. James Church, played during the ceremony. After the ceremony a tea was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Hibbard left by motor for a wedding trip. They will be at home at Melrose Castle, Casanova, Va.

Because of the quarantine for infantile paralysis the formal wedding plans were canceled.

Miss Doudge was born in New York, but with her mother and sister, has spent much time in Warrenton, where she attended the Warrenton Country School, completing her education abroad. Mr. Hibbard was born in Detroit, but with his parents moved to Fauquier County, where they purchased Melrose Castle. Mr. Hibbard attended Stuyvesant School, Warrenton, and was joint master of fox hounds, Casanova Hunt, and is manager of the Melrose estate.

The young couple have been extensively entertained, both here and in Washington.

Man Is Winner Of Knitting Bee

John Cann Triumphs Over 100 Women in Contest at Boston.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 15.—Skill he learned at his mother's knee in Nova Scotia 47 years ago won the knitting title for John F. Cann.

He arrived late—as a matter of fact the contest was half finished—but his dexterity with the long white needles won him a prize of a dozen skeins of yarn at the end of the race.

John paused long enough during his operations on a red stripe of the American Flag to explain that he was taught to knit in Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, when he was a lad of three.

"Someone had to help mother out," he explained, "because I had five other brothers who were very hard on their knitted stockings.

"I've knitted ever since, and I find it helpful in supporting my invalid wife in New Hampshire."

Paint the Porch Now

Women Who Still Want to Cry, 'It Isn't Fair' Should Go to See Revivals of Old Melodramas

By Malvina Lindsay.

WOMEN who still voice the old plaint that "it's not fair" that men can do this and men can do that should view some of the current revivals of old-time melodramas. They will then realize that even more momentous things have happened in the twentieth century than the airplane and radio.

• • • •

Chief of these has been the blotting out of the scarlet letter from the breast of the woman who makes a moral mistake. In the older tear-jerkers the unwed mother was cast out into the snowstorm and the erring wife became a social leper. In today's fiction, the virgin becomes a subject for the psychiatrists and the faithless wife flourishes like the Green Bay tree.

• • • •

Both of these viewpoints, of course, are dramatic extremes and neither fully represents the moral opinion of their eras. But both are symbolic of the profound social change that has taken place in the feminine world—a change that may be prophetic of greater revolution to come.

THE theme of the erring woman and her punishment was a favorite one in novels and plays through the latter half of the nineteenth century. "East Lynne," which playgoers now find quaint melodrama and even highly humorous, was taken seriously through the 90's and even into the twentieth century. The point of view it and other plays of its kind embodied prevailed widely up to the World War period.

• • • •

In justice to our forbears, however, it should be admitted that the fate of the feminine sinner of past epochs has always been exaggerated. There were indeed some erring girls who were thrown out on the world by irate fathers; some weak wives who were hounded by vengeful husbands. There were other sensitive creatures who like Aunt Agatha of Ellen Glasgow's "They Stooped to Folly" were condemned by their own consciences or their families' vanity to hide their faces forever from the world. But a surprisingly large number of wronged girls wound up by marrying substantial husbands—occasionally the neighborhood catch—and appeared in later life as respected mothers, church workers and clubwomen. Then, as now, it was largely the woman's own consciousness of sin—or her lack of it—that determined her fate.

• • • •

Nevertheless, women, up to the time invention opened economic opportunity to them and the World War broadened social viewpoint, were hedged about with many moral injustices and social taboos. Many adults of today can remember when a divorced woman's name was mentioned with lifted eyebrows. They can remember when a woman who smoked was considered "a little fast," when one who went about at night alone was suspected, when one who took up athletics was "coarse," when one who wore a one-piece bathing suit was brazen.

WOMEN'S greatest strides toward social and moral enfranchisement have come within the last 15 years—a period of greater psychological significance to femininity than any in history. Not only did exterior events make this advance possible, but women's own cumulative efforts over a half century of struggle toward a more expansive life began to bear fruit.

• • • •

From this women today can take heart. Now it is true their social taboos are negligible. But some still exist, notably the social stigma that still pursues an intellectual woman in many middle-class societies and causes too many younger women to conceal their brains instead of using them aggressively.

• • • •

But the struggle today largely is on the economic front. It is the struggle of the needy married women to hold jobs, of deserving women of all kinds with dependent mothers, fathers and children on their backs to escape being cast out into the snowstorm. It is to be hoped that the social changes that have come in the last half century, even in the last 15 years, may repeat themselves in the economic field. Perhaps 50 years hence the back-to-the-kitchen scene will be the "Begone, wicked woman" one of quaint melodrama.

Use of Article Guides Buyer's Color Tastes

Red, Orange, Black Connote Heaviness; Pastels Less Weight, Study Shows.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—The color you like varies with the use of the object bearing the color.

Nationally, color preference changes in waves which sweep whole sections of the country, and may vary with the price of a colored article—an indication that pocketbooks influence ideas of beauty.

These preferences are shown in an exhibit at the New York Museum of Science and Industry by Howard Ketcham. They are based on reports of his representatives throughout the country on the colors which help best to sell anything from automobiles to tooth brushes.

For 10-cent tooth brushes, Mr. Ketcham finds red the best selling color. But it is not in the 25-cent brush, where amber receives the preference.

A recent survey for boudoir sets showed 42 per cent of the women preferring coral, and 19 per cent favoring lilac. The other colors tested were purple-blue turquoise, yellow-red, white and yellow. None of these rates higher than 9 per cent.

Why Eggs Are Packed in Blue.

"That is why," Mr. Ketcham says, "white eggs are packed in boxes with blue dividers and brown eggs placed against white dividers."

For coffee and cake cartons, both men and women like black least. For coffee cartons their first three color choices in a survey were a certain shade of yellow-red, a yellow and a red. For cake it was a certain yellow, pure white and a certain yellow-red.

In fruit cans women reported white as first choice, a yellow second and a certain shade of red third.

Buyer With Style Sense Can Become Fashion Plate by Following Sales

By John Q. Alexander.

YOU may have no more distinction than an alley cat and still be destined for great things, but we doubt it.

Men, we've observed, are divided into two classes: Mere men and (the ladies refuse to recognize the next category) men who matter. For the former, life is a stuffy, hamburger-in-a-lunch-wagon affair, crawling with small annoyances like bills and boredom. The latter, on the other hand, are blessed with a table-for-two-in-the-moonlight existence, bubbling over with pretty girls, obsequious waiters, good jobs and (you've guessed it) clothes that make the man.

Clothes are important. They can give you charm when you haven't any; make you look well whether you feel so or not; create the illusion of personality when you're in truth as dull as a tailor's dummy. Clothes, in a word, are the first big step toward becoming a Man Who Matters.

Though there's nothing new in men's wear just now, there are some swell sales going on. This is the time to buy, since a month remains in which to wear airy garments, and when next spring rolls around and prices soar once more, you'll be patting yourself on the back for your own foresightedness.

Congo Suits Marked Down.

For instance, remember those Congo cloth suits we got so worked up about a few weeks ago? They're available in colors and white, marked down from $22.50 to $13.50. Congo cloth is a brand-new fabric that will keep you cooler than California's famous frozen monkey during the dog days to come.

The same store is virtually trying to give you the shirt on your back by selling seersucker, mesh and other lightweight shirts for $1.19—they were $1.95. White, pastels and deep tones are included, some with the smart button-down collar. The deep tones will be wearable all through autumn, with sports clothes.

Among the little things that count in a man's wardrobe are terry pullovers—fine for the beach, for the tennis court or for general loafing. They've been $1 all summer, but now you can take one home for 59 cents—dirt cheap. White, canary or blue, or in horizontal three-toned stripes.

This is a Friday special, and if you want one you'll have to go down today. They were originally $6.95. Strong and preshrunk and good for knock-about and office wear. Single and double breasted models.

Another Friday-only bargain is in summer pajamas, in all sorts of gay colors, in all sorts of summer fabrics, including voile and mesh. We liked best a pair consisting of a thin stripe of material and then a thin stripe of nothing (except a few threads), then a thin stripe of material, then a thin stripe of nothing. The price will make you glad all over and the fabrics keep you cool in the same place. Marked down for today only, from $1.95 and $2.50 to $1.19.

Now you can get those perfectly plain heatherish swimming trunks we mentioned awhile back for $1.55—they were $2.00. They are completely guiltless of gadgets, and have a narrow concealed belt visible for only a brief three inches across the front. They are simple and smart and will make you look as sleek as a trained seal. The one store has higher-priced suits reduced proportionately.

Most men's shorts, woe betide us, are like the Indian's in pioneer days—they creep up on you, if you see what we mean. However, French back shorts are something special in that they have no center seam, lying perfectly flat across the back. They give you plenty of leg room, having small pleats across the front, and an adjustable waist band, in case you're gaining or losing weight. The price of these, usually $1.00 per pair, has dropped to the very bottom—55 cents. White, colors and fancy weaves.

If you're interested in pre-season fall sales, there are some good ones now. One store has reduced a lot of handsome $3.00 and $3.50 shirts to $1.88. These are of fine madras and broadcloth so strong that they will remain your bosom companions for many months to come, let the laundries do what they may. Plain colors and white.

This outfitter is featuring also an August sale of winter overcoats. $30 and $34 coats are reduced to $24 and others accordingly. They have 2,000 to choose from, and many choice imported fabrics are included. If you've got the money, it would be a good idea to get yourself a coat now instead of later, when prices zoom upward.

Two-Faced Elegance In Coats.

Our idea of two-faced elegance is the convertible raincoat-topcoat. It's good-looking tweed on one side and a couple of quick twists of the wrist will turn it inside out into a gaberdine water-proof raincoat. These were popular in the universities last winter and are destined to to stay right here in town when the boys go back to school this fall. They are cut English-style, with balmacaan collar, raglan shoulder and full-drape back. On sale now for $28 and $32—they were, and will be later on, $35 and $40.

If you suddenly discover you've 50 cents extra this week, let prosperity go to your feet and purchase a pair of the new silk socks with buffer heel and toe. They are of pure thread silk, in white, black, gray, and brown, and the vital spots are so well reinforced that they should wear and wear—but never out. Half a dollar per pair.

Last but not least, we want to mention a sleeveless pullover jacket-sweater which is just the thing for golf and other outdoor sports. The front is of soft chamois and the back of fine knit material, to allow you plenty of action and swing. V-neck, and two generous pockets for cigarettes and other paraphernalia. Really the best looking thing of its kind we've seen. You can get it in light suede with dark brown knitted back and dark brown trim, or in dark suede with light back and trim. $3.

Congo and Seersucker Suits Are Among Bargains.

Mr. Alexander's articles, written exclusively for The Post, appear every Friday on this page. For information on men's fashions, or for the names of the shops carrying the apparel described above, call National 4200, branch 323. Or write, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Please tell me if there is any agency in Washington to which I can apply for information or advice which would be of help in the case of my brother-in-law, which is as follows:

He is a man of about 35, of limited education (I am not even sure that he finished high school), who has lived all his life in a small Mid-western town supporting himself by various kinds of manual labor. He is unmarried and his only close relatives are a married half-sister, who lives in that same town, and my husband.

• • • •

About eight months ago he was injured in an automobile accident. He lost his right arm and suffered a complicated jaw fracture. He was in the hospital for several months and is still in poor health and, of course, is severely handicapped by the loss of his arm. He has been living with his sister's family for the most part and also wandering about through all that part of the country trying to find something to do, but naturally there is little enough for even an able-bodied man.

• • • •

The sister's husband has very small means and we have been sending my brother-in-law small sums to help out and can continue to do so indefinitely. But the point is that he suffers from the inactivity and the feeling of being dependent. If there were only something that he could do to keep him busy and make him feel that he could at least provide his own necessities!

• • • •

We have asked him to come to us but he seems reluctant, and of course he would be happier in the town where he has always lived and among his own friends, provided he can find occupation there.

• • • •

Now, is there any person or persons in Washington who could help us with this sort of problem? Thank you so much for any help. Sincerely, G. P.

Case for Relief Administrator.

DEAR G. P.: So far as I can learn, the most practicable solution of your brother-in-law's situation is for him to make application to the Federal relief administrator in his own community and get in line for one of the jobs being apportioned by the Works Progress Administration.

• • • •

Only those persons who are on community relief rolls are entitled to such jobs, I am told; so if your brother-in-law is willing to avow his inability to support himself, and to petition public relief (and the circumstances surrounding his case would seem to justify his taking such action) he can reasonably expect to benefit by some of the "made work" now being furnished by the Government.

• • • •

"But is there no other way of obtaining help for a man in his predicament?" I asked the WPA representative who gave me the foregoing information. "Absolutely none that I know of," was the reply. It occurs to me that readers of this column may have some constructive suggestions to offer. Any letters on the subject will be very welcome. M. H.

Scolding Fails To Cure Child Of Untidiness

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

Associated Press Staff Writer.

"How can I teach my daughter to be tidy? She has a charming room, dainty clothes, and plenty of them, but her room always looks as if a whirlwind had blown through it, and her clothes give the general impression of having been slept in.

"I am neat and orderly in the extreme, and her father has almost a mania for order and cleanliness, so why should our own child, born and bred in such an environment, be sloppy and untidy about her room and person? I keep after her and scold her, and in the end spend an hour or two a day straightening out her room and cleaning and repairing her clothes. I simply can't bear living with one room in a mess."

It was just there that the mother made her mistake. She could not stand the mess herself even for the sake of training her child. If from the outset she had made the child responsible for clearing up and putting away her toys, and had quietly confiscated whatever was left lying about, the youngster would soon have learned by sad experience that neatness paid.

If now she would permit her daughter to wear crushed and tumbled dresses to school and play, merely calling attention to the fact that if the dress had been hung up it would have stayed fresh longer, the child would soon take to putting her clothes away. If the little girl's room were left in a mess until cleaning day and then put to rights without comment, but with a thoroughness which threw out whatever seemed of so little value as to be left lying about, two weeks would see a change in the room.

In any event, scolding and direct punishment are useless. The child knows that in the end the mother will take on the burden of bringing room and clothes to rights.

Shops in Paris Display Well-Tailored Undies

Paris (U.P.).—Paris shops are showing expertly tailored underwear in a wide range of styles. Crepe de chine and satin creations are trimmed with delicate embroidery, which is considered much smarter and more practical than lace. Taffeta skirts with a design of ruching around the hem are worn as petticoats under evening gowns. The skirt of the evening gown hangs far more gracefully over the stiff taffeta, which is not at all unattractive if it happens to swirl out during a dance.

Inexpensive 3-Piece Ensemble Is Basis of School Wardrobe

Pattern No. 974.

ALTHOUGH it is practically the basis of a whole year's school wardrobe, this three-piece ensemble can be made for less than $15 in size 12. And that includes the full length coat, lined and interlined.

Here is the arithmetic on this classic and correct ensemble. The coat and skirt require 3⅛ yards of 54-inch woolen. At $2 a yard, that makes $6.25; 1½ yards of interlining at $2 a yard and 2 yards of lining at 75 cents will cost $4.50. The long-sleeved blouse requires 1½ yards of gingham or novelty cotton costing about 50 cents. The pattern and findings will amount to approximately 50 cents. That totals $11.75—less than the cost of a spring coat.

Best of all, the finished ensemble will look and wear as only a well-made, well-styled outfit can. The sizes are 8 to 16.

Dressmaking Done Superbly At Local Shop

By Dudley Harmon.

Substituting for Ruth Anne Davis.

MARY JONES—that is not her real name, but it will do—started sewing when she was 8 years old. At the age when most children tear their dolls to pieces, Mary preferred to make clothes for hers. Stitching hats and dresses, rather than playing tag or hopscotch, was her idea of a good time.

As you might expect, Mary grew up to be a dressmaker. Furthermore, she is located right here in town, in her own shop on Connecticut avenue.

Her nimble fingers and flying needle will make you anything from a housecrobe to an evening dress. From the simplest model to the most complicated, it's the same to her. She's equally good at them all.

Her tailored dresses are as beautifully finished as those made by men. We saw one which was cut and stitched in the most Bond streetish fashion ever. Buttonholes, pleats and hem were perfectly cut and sewed.

Friction Lotion on Sale.

WE SPOTTED a grand bath accessory the other day. It's called a friction lotion, and is on sale at an F street department store. It differs from eau de cologne in that it actually stimulates the circulation. Apply it all over after your bath, and notice the almost immediate effect on a sluggish condition. It has a delightful scent, as well, and will leave you fresh and fragrant. This lotion also closes the pores, eliminating the danger of catching cold after a bath. It has the same effect as a dusting powder, and leaves the skin satin smooth in texture. The price is only $1.

New Note in Gloves.

THE PERSONAL TOUCH, it seems, has invaded even the glove world. We saw some stunning ones the other day which come with your monogram attached.

These gloves are made of pigskin, that sturdy material which can stand any amount of wear and still look smart. They come in black, white, brown and gray, to match all costumes. The initial is placed on a button at the wrist. The letter is old English style, and the colors are black, brown and gold.

We learned several interesting facts about pigskin in talking with the saleswoman. For one thing, it seems that the fewer the markings on this material, the better the quality. The gloves on sale at this store have practically no markings whatever. You'll find them ideal for fall and winter, and the price is only $3.95.

Improves Patterns.

Most of us have had at least one painful experience with patterns which looked so attractive in the book and so awful when made up. When this dressmaker copies a frock from a pattern, however, it looks, if anything, even better than it did in the illustration. That's because she knows how to get the most out of cut and directions.

How about your winter coat? Doesn't that need relining? It's probably a little frayed around the edges after a season's hard wear. To put it into the pink of condition, take it around to this establishment, where it will be fixed up in no time at all, and for very little money.

This dressmaker also does alterations at a lower price than that charged by most department stores. The pretty frock in which you never feel quite comfortable because it is too baggy can be taken in expertly here.

She is a whizz at remodeling old clothes as well. After all, there's no reason why perfectly good material should be condemned to the dog house just because the style it is made up in is outmoded. This dressmaker has many brilliant ideas on how to fix up dresses so as to bring them right back into style again.

She is particularly clever at making lingerie. Her undergarments are made every stich by hand, and trimmed with the loveliest laces. Prospective brides who are getting their trousseaus together should pay her a visit.

Culbertson On Bridge

Forcing to Game.

The 1935 Culbertson System provides two forcing suit take-outs of opening bids. One type is forcing for one round only and is not a jump bid. The other type, the jump take-out, is forcing for as many rounds as necessary to reach a game.

Some players argue that since they can force without jumping, they may as well postpone their jump bid until the next round. Their reasoning is wrong, for, though the tragic result of today's hand is an exceptional case, it is not wise to wait too long before telling your partner how strong you are.

Both sides vulnerable.

North and South, part-score 40.

	♠ J 10 9 7 4 2 ♡ K J 8 ◇ K 3 ♣ 8 6
♠ Q 6 5 ♡ 4 3 ◇ A J 8 6 4 ♣ K Q J	W E S	♠ A K ♡ A Q 10 5 ◇ Q 7 ♣ A 10 9 7 3
	♠ 8 3 ♡ 9 7 6 2 ◇ 10 9 5 2 ♣ 5 4 2

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
Pass	1◇(1)	1♠(2)	2♣(3)
Pass	Pass(4)	Pass

1—West made a minimum opening bid, largely because his opponents had a part-score and he wanted to avoid the danger of overcalling at the range of two.

2—North's hand was light for a vulnerable overcall, but he hoped to steal a game at two spades if South had passed a fairly good hand.

3—Not only was East unusually strong, he had two suits of his own and a fit with West's diamonds. He could have bid three clubs over one spade, or he could have bid two spades himself showing no losers in that suit. Instead, East decided to wait and see what would happen. He was not wise to do so.

4—It is possible to turn all the blame on West, for he committed the unpardonable sin—he passed a forcing bid. His action, however, was not without some justification. He reasoned game was not particularly likely with his weak hand. He was afraid to bid two diamonds with so weak a suit, afraid to raise to clubs for fear the bidding would get out of control, and particularly afraid to bid two notrump with a doubtful spade stopper and nothing whatsoever in hearts.

The Play.

South made the best possible opening for declarer—a heart. All 13 tricks were easily won, two hearts being ruffed in dummy and the small diamond being discarded finally on the Queen of spades.

Both East and West felt aggrieved when it was all over and, of course, both had cause. My principal point in discussing the hand is to stress East's error, since West's is so obvious. Many players believe by making a low bid on the first round, such as the One-over-One bid, they save a round of bidding. A bit of analysis will show them the fallacy, for on the very next round they must jump the bidding and if they are showing a second suit, they will actually lose ground instead of saving it. East should have made his forcing take-out and not have chanced the possibility that West might pass.

Sweater Tops College Girls' Apparel Poll

Knit-Tweed Ensemble Is Favorite; Lipstick First in Cosmetic Vote.

WHEN YOU GO to college this fall, take plenty of sweaters, tweed skirts and a becoming lipstick, and you have the sartorial basis for the higher education.

Hundreds of college girls who voted on the questionnaire recently sent out by Harper's Bazaar asking what college girls really like to wear and do wear on the campus rendered a unanimous verdict in favor of these items.

"This sweater uniform was developed," Harper's Bazaar states, "not from designers in Paris nor promotion in America; it sprang direct from the college girl's own love of the practical, from her passion to live with the health and comfort of a child.

"The college girl pushes the sleeves up over her elbows, and buttons her cardigans down the back, contrasts her dark sweaters with light skirts, and enlivens the neck with a strand of pearls, a printed silk square, or a scarf of the silk."

The voters agreed that the important cosmetic is the lipstick. Any girl may arise with the breakfast bell, rush to her coffee in only a dress and her face may shine throughout the day, but her lips are never undressed. And she picks her shades with discretion.

Geraldine Trotta, Barnard College student, who won the first prize for her ballot, gave this general advice to girls going away to school this fall:

"Be young and smart and dashing. Avoid fussing and elaboration, and above all remember it is better to underdress than to overdress.

"Wool, of course, is the nucleus of the college wardrobe for the campus and games. Afternoon dresses in sheer wool crepes and jerseys are also smart. Plain dresses that depend on their fit and lines are among the most popular because they are flattering and stylish without sacrificing simplicity.

"Keep your clothes pretty dark. Brown, mustard and dark greens are good. Rust does not rank with these colors because it is apt to make your complexion look peculiar, and I'll defy anyone to find a lipstick that won't clash with it."

Unsweetened Pineapple Juice Answers the Problem Of How to Prepare Appetizing Summer Cocktails

Unsweetened pineapple juice forms the basis for numerous intriguing summer beverages. The cooling pineapple loganberry punch is excellent for porch supper or large gatherings and the Southern style cocktail is a refreshing dinner appetizer or a perfect drink for the children's party.

Eating Salt Raises Resistance to Heat

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 15.—The eating of salt has greatly decreased heat prostrations in this city this summer, in the opinion of Dr. Edwin Henry Schorer, health director. Last year about 150 persons died here from heat strokes. Autopsies performed on the victims disclosed a shortage of salt.

At the outset of this summer's heat wave Dr. Schorer issued advice to the public to eat salt daily. Many heat victims taken to the general hospital were treated by injecting salt solutions into their veins. They showed marked improvement.

Health-Giving Ingredient Supplies Tang and Flavor Certain to Prove Popular With Most Discriminating Guests; Easy Recipes Listed.

By Dorotheea Duncan.

SKILL at making appetizing summer drinks plays a large part in the popularity of a hostess. If you are tired of the same old beverages and would like to serve something that will make your friends come again, try using unsweetened pineapple juice as a basis for your summer cocktails and other drinks. Aside from its health-giving properties the pineapple juice provides a tang that will save any summer drink from flatness. Following are two recipes that show how it may be used:

Pineapple Loganberry Punch.

1 cup unsweetened pineapple juice
1 cup loganberry juice
⅝ cup sugar
1 pint (2 cups) carbonated water

Dissolve the sugar in the mixed fruit juices, chill and let stand until ready to serve. Add the carbonated water and pour over cracked ice. Garnish with a few fresh or canned berries.

This makes an excellent party punch. For serving 50, multiply the recipe by 8, and serve in a punch bowl with a large piece of ice.

Southern Style Cocktail.

1½ cups unsweetened pineapple juice
1½ cups white rock water
1½ teaspoons chopped mint leaves
6 fresh sprigs of mint
2 tablespoons sugar

Dissolve the sugar in one-half cup of the pineapple juice. Add a few chopped mint leaves, put on the fire and boil 5 minutes. Strain through cheesecloth, add other items, shake well and serve ice cold with one sprig of fresh mint in each glass. This is an excellent beverage for children's parties and they will particularly like it if served with the colored candy straws which are now quite the vogue.

Blackberry Cobbler.

2 cups sifted flour
4 tablespoons sugar
6 tablespoons butter or other shortening
3 cups fresh blackberries
2 tablespoons flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2-3 cup milk (about)
¾ cup sugar
½ cup blackberry juice

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, sugar and salt, and sift again. Cut in shortening. Add milk gradually until soft dough is formed. Roll two-thirds of dough ¼ inch thick on slightly floured board. Fit into square pan, 8 by 8 by 2 inches, lining sides well. Combine blackberries with mixture of sugar and flour. Turn into lined pan. Pour over ½ cup of juice left from stewed blackberries or made from fresh berries pressed through a sieve. Roll remaining third of dough to ¼-inch thickness. With sharp knife make slits to permit escape of steam. Fit over blackberries, pressing edges of dough together. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) 15 minutes; reduce heat to moderate (350 degrees F.), and bake 30 to 35 minutes longer. Serves 8. Serve with cream or hard sauce.

Diarrhea Toll Among Babies Due to Neglect

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

DIARRHEA in babies, particularly in the summer time, is a symptom of grave importance. Of course, there are cases in which it may mean little, but ignoring the condition often spells disaster. In 1932, in 26 States, there were more than 10,000 infant deaths from diarrhea. In fact, available data indicate that summer diarrhea causes more deaths among children under the age of 2 than any other single condition.

Once started, summer diarrhea is a difficult problem to manage, particularly in very young children. Heat favors the growth of bacteria in milk and since milk constitutes the bulk of the baby's food, more bacteria may be unwittingly added to those already present in the intestinal tract. Hot, humid days tend not only to multiply bacteria, but to decrease the resistance of these little patients and lower the normal secretion of digestive fluids.

Although there are several types of diarrhea, the so-called fermentative variety is the most common. Vomiting is a characteristic symptom and is usually followed by abdominal colic and distention as well as by an unusual amount of intestinal gas. Diarrhea rather promptly makes it appearance and there are symptoms of fever, irritability, restlessness and prostration. The reaction of the excreted material is frequently acid, and the skin of the buttocks will show areas of reddening, irritation and scalding.

Once the attack has occurred the intestinal tract must be emptied to rid it of offending material. If, however, diarrhea has swept the digestive tract clear there is no advantage in giving laxatives.

The diet is extremely important and one plan advocates boiled skimmed milk in small quantities. If this is well digested the quantity is increased and fats are gradually added. Sometimes the intravenous injection of sodium bicarbonate is necessary to counteract acidosis.

Sculptor's Nail File Bust Started Career

By Marie Duvall.

IN HER LOG studio, shaded by a copse of pines near Odenton, Md., Helen Journeay, nationally-known sculptor, yesterday told how she got her start 12 years ago when a rising sculptor admired a bust she was modeling with a fingernail file and hairpin.

The sculptor was Mahonri Young, grandson of Brigham Young. Encouraging her to study at a recognized school, it was not long before the Maryland artist was a repeated winner at Maryland Institute of Art, Baltimore. After a course under the late J. Maxwell Miller, she was awarded a traveling European scholarship by the institute.

A decade ago, Miss Journeay pointed out, women had made little headway in making themselves known in sculpturing circles. At best the feminine clays were considered nothing more than handicapped efforts. They were supposed not to have the strength, patience and endurance, of masculine creations.

With the rise of woman in business fields and in projects formerly relegated to men, sculpturing by feminine hands became a serious threat. Women, critics agreed, were mentally equipped for transferring softer interpretations into clay.

Today after a dozen years of sculpturing, Miss Journeay looks to the inspiration of southern Maryland to create the garden figures, bas-reliefs, and portrait heads of children which have won her recognition.

"Beneath the seriousness of sculptoring," she confided, brushing dried clay off her overalls, "the art has its amusing incidents." She pointed to a plaster of paris nude figure entitled 'Dawn." A righteous Southern gentlemen who had seen its orginal in Gorham's window timidly suggested that he might buy it if only somewhat of a veil were draped over one of the shoulders.

Gorham officials immediately went into a conference with Miss Journeay. Perhaps she could do something about it, they suggested. Within a few days, "Dawn" had been equipped with a veil, recast in bronze, and the order filled.

Miss Journeay is a graduate of Barnard College, of Columbia University. Although she knew nothing about art at the time, she insisted, she was made art editor of the college publication. Two years ago her work won her membership in the National Society of Women Sculptors and Painters.

Now, in Maryland Studio, She Molds Her Famous Garden Figures.

● Sending Sidney Skolsky, the famous Broadway columnist, 'way out West to cover Hollywood was just like ordering the society editor to report on a war. That was what the wiseacres were saying not so long ago. After all, they explained, Skolsky was pretty good at writing tintypes of Broadway characters, and getting stories in the night clubs, and all that sort of thing, but what would happen to him when Hollywood's press agents got hold of him, or the Klieg lights dazzled him, or he tried to understand a studio executive's English?

But those who laughed when he sat down at his typewriter are cheering lustily now, for Skolsky's Hollywood column is better, more varied, more amusing, than Hollywood itself. It's four-star stuff, with the smooth performance of a Myrna Loy, the direction of a Frank Capra, the glamour of a Cecil DeMille production, and the human interest of a Mickey Mouse cartoon.

In short, Skolsky is writing a column from Hollywood which is even better than was his Broadway column, and if you aren't reading it five days every week in The Washington Post you're missing something.

Town Officials Kiwanis Guests At Alexandria

Hosts Limit All Speeches to 3⅛ Minutes and Bell Calls Time.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Alexandria Kiwanis Club had as its guests yesterday the officials of the city government. Irving Diener, program chairman, informed each of the guests that he or she would be limited to three and one-eighths minutes for a speech, which caused much amusement, when a bell was rung, terminating the speeches, and causing several of the speakers to request the privilege of "extending his remarks," at a later date.

Charles H. Callahan, commissioner of revenue; City Manager Emmett C. Dunn; Roger C. Sullivan, city treasurer; Judge James Reese Duncan, of the civil and police court; James M. Duncan, jr., chief of the fire department; John S. Arnold, police captain; Miss Barbara Watkins, head of the Federal Relief, and Mrs. Mae E. Bowman, representing the health department, were among the speakers.

The convention fund appropriated by the city council for the local fire companies to attend the State convention, which they voted not to participate in owing to the fear of bringing infantile paralysis back to their homes, was divided between the four fire companies and the rescue squad. The fire units received $500 and the rescue squad approximately $350.

President Norman Roberts, of Columbia Engine Co., has stated that company will use the fund for various entertainments to be sponsored during the coming year for the benefit of the members.

Harry Rudd, manager of the Alexandria municipal swimming pool, states that at present the attendance at the pool is so slim there is a possibility of the city officials closing it as it is now running at a loss. Manager Rudd urged that the pool be continued for the remainder of the season.

A meeting of the Maj. James E. King Camp, No. 20, United Spanish War Veterans, will be held at 7:30 o'clock tonight at Lee Camp Hall, 806 Prince street. Commander Charles B. Emmons urges a full attendance.

Bob Considine, a Washington sports writer, was the speaker at the meeting of the Alexandria Lions Club on Wednesday, talking on "Why Americans Are Sports-minded."

Dr. George Schlosser, president of the club, presided, and reports on the progress of the donkey baseball game to be staged by the club on August 22 and 23 were given by Isadore Bregman, chairman of the committee. The Alexandria Citizens Band and the American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps will furnish music for the event.

Mrs. Virginia Wade Ryder, city supervisor of playgrounds, reports that approximately 3,000 children per week have attended the seven playgrounds in the city since early in June, when they were opened.

The grounds are run on a definite schedule made out by the directors, who are also in charge of equipment and the providing of new equipment. The older boys and girls participate in baseball games, tennis and track, while story telling and sewing amuse the smaller ones.

Montgomery County Students Return to School on Sept. 16

1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Supt. Edwin W. Broome announced yesterday that county schools would open September 16.

A conference of white teachers will be held in the Montgomery County High School at Rockville September 11. Teachers will work in their respective buildings on the subsequent Thursday and Friday, at which time all pupils entering local schools for the first time or who transfer to a new building will be required to register.

Among new activities for this fall is the establishment of school bus service to transport high school pupils in the Kensington area to the Leland Junior High School and the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Senior High School.

The Bethesda-Chevy Chase Senior High grades will occupy the new high school building on the East-West highway. The former senior high school will be a junior high school known as Leland. The new elementary school near Four Corners has been designated as Parkside School.

Applications for old-age pensions under the old-age pension law which went into effect June 1 are being received by the Montgomery County Welfare Board which has been designed as the agency to administer the pensions here, Miss Dorothy A. Everson, executive secretary of the board, announced yesterday.

Miss Everson also announced, however, that no funds have as yet been allocated to the county.

The welfare board has been authorized to fix the amount of each pension. Miss Everson said this would be done with due regard to the conditions in each case. However, the amount is limited by law to a figure not exceeding $30 per month when added to any income the applicant may have. In the case of no income the applicant could be granted a pension as high as $30.

The Postoffice Department is today advertising for bids for a site in Silver Spring for a new postoffice building, provided for this week in the bill authorizing construction of 351 postoffice buildings.

Bids will be opened and read at the present Silver Spring postoffice at 9 a. m. August 26. The advertisement for bids gives approximate dimensions desired at 125-foot frontage by 190-foot depth for corner lots and 150-foot frontage by 190-foot depth for interior lots.

Mrs. Duley attended Calvary Baptist Church here, taking active part in its affairs for many years.

She also is survived by Gilmore Duley, a brother. Her two daughters died in their youth.

Funeral services will be held in the W. R. Pumphrey funeral home in Rockville tomorrow at 3 p. m. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Library Gets Books—If Luck Changes

Somewhere on Seventeenth street northwest are 400 books that have been offered the Takoma Park (Md.) Public Library. The only catch is that the library committee doesn't know the address of the generous donor and can't call for the books.

The Washington Post was asked last night to request that the person who called the Takoma Park Police Station and offered the books to the library get in touch with Mrs. F. L. Pratt, Shepherd 2248, or the police station, Shepherd 2201, and give them his or her address.

The policeman who answered the telephone did not get the address before the party hung up. The town policemen have been ringing doorbells on Seventeenth street in an effort to locate the books, but found the street too long to hope for success.

Serve Supper Tonight.

Mackey to Run For Arlington County Board

Life-Long Resident, Former Engineer Is Independent Candidate.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

Lincoln Mackey, a life-long resident of Arlington County, has thrown his hat in the political ring as an independent candidate for membership on the county board of five.

Mr. Mackey, the son of Capt. Crandal Mackey, former Commonwealth's attorney for Arlington County, served as the county engineer during 1930 to 1932. He is a civil engineer and a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers. He is also a member of the Arlington Post, No. 139, American Legion.

While making no promises, he says he is in favor of all progressive movements which are for the best interests of all the citizens. If elected in November he will always work for all the citizens and not favor increase in taxes.

Dividing the contract for the resurfacing of approximately 30 miles of county roads, the county board in special session yesterday afternoon awarded the contract to the Drummond Co., of Baltimore, Md., and Corson & Gruman, of Washington.

The Drummond Co. will furnish slag and stone in place. Their portion of the contract is $16,036.40. Corson & Gruman will furnish the bituminious products. Their contract calls for the payment of $14,459.78.

The specifications call for streets to be improved where sewers have not been installed. The work will start within the next ten days.

Bids for the improving of more than 60 miles of roads along which sewers have been installed will be received and opened by the county manager on September 12. Action will be taken by the board at its meeting on September 14.

Bender Rails At Roosevelt In Richmond

Congress Is 'Spineless,' Speaker Tells Party Rally in Virginia.

By the Associated Press.

To the Supreme Court he attributed the salvation of the Constitution from "complete destruction."

Addressing the Republican Club of Virginia, he said, "today we have the dismal spectacle of a spineless Congress completely dominated by a fumbling, thwarted, inconsistent and grandiose Executive."

Defeat Predicted Again.

Bender, who has insisted that Gov. Davey of Ohio call a special election to fill the vacancy created by the death of Representative Charles V. Traux, a Democrat, forcing what he termed a referendum on the New Deal, reiterated his assertions of Democratic defeat in the forthcoming presidential election.

"When the smoke and fog which are synonymous with official Washington finally clear away in the victory of the Republican Party," he said, "the only courageous and consistent part of this bleak period of American history will be the record of the Supreme Court. To that body, the men and women of this Nation should yield up a thankful prayer."

"The beautiful division" among executive, legislative and judicial departments, he asserted, "has been destroyed" so that today the Constitution "has become a no man's land, a hodge podge, with its symmetry destroyed ruthlessly." The Supreme Court, he said, "is the last line of our defense."

"For with Congress completely surrendering its historic function," he said "the Executive has run rampant. Wild-eyed schemes from boon-doggling to leaf-raking, contradictory policies, every device conceivable to a frantic and disorganized Executive, have been trotted out for public consumption. Absurdity after absurdity have been rammed down our throats until we are sick with bureaucratic dyphtheria.

Panacea Denounced.

"Panaceas for our ills, CWA, PWA, FERA and now WPA, have followed each other in bewildering and maddening succession. If our country were ever to drown, that danger has been tremendously augmented by the lakes of alphabetical soup plotted everywhere in our midst. Franklin Delano Roosevelt himself and all the brilliant disciples of the Department of Justice could not tell us what 50 per cent of their alphabetical agencies represent. Stalin in despotic Russia was never so fertile in his alphabetical abbreviations as Roosevelt in free America. All that we have yet to see to make a mockery of free life in our great Nation is an American OGPU."

Asserting that "every step taken by the Administration has been a blow at that necessary revival of business," Bender said that "if recovery ever comes it must come in spite of Franklin Roosevelt * * * smiling radio voice, a cheery fireside manner, an indestructible and wholly unjustified optimism cannot eradicate the memory of policies which have permanently undermined confidence."

Companion Is Held In Boy's Drowning

Youth Accused of Enticing Victim Beyond Depth.

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md. Aug. 15.—Samuel Morris, 19-year-old Negro, was being held by police here today pending outcome of an investigation in the drowning of George L. Johns, 16, Negro, in an abandoned quarry.

Morris was arrested after youths who witessed the drowning earlier in the day told officers the older boy induced Johns to go into the water shortly after he had been rescued by Warren Watson, 13-year-old white youth.

Morris told Johns he would "teach him a few tricks" at swimming, the other boys said. Johns went down in water too far from shore for Watson or the other youths to attempt another rescue. State's Attorney Martin L. Ingram ordered an investigation.

Angler Finds 3 Fish On Line Holding One

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 15.—Fishing in the James River a day or two ago near Reusesn, William Jones, of Madison Heights, hooked a small sun perch and strung it. In the next hour or two his luck was poor and he decided to take the small fry and go home. Trials to Begin Today in Water Rents Dispute Hagerstown Attempting to Collect; 64 Residents Refuse to Pay.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 15.—The first of a series of suits entered by the city against 64 residents along the Smithsburg highway, some of whom haven't paid for water used from the Hagerstown main for 30 years, will be heard here tomorrow. Five suits for $30, representing nonpayment for three years will be heard before Magistrate Robert Brindle.

The city, which owns the water system and mains, has sought for years to collect rents and succeeded in obtaining payment from some of the users along the pike.

Some of those who have refused to pay contend they had an agreement with the company which the city purchased, whereby they get free water for the use of right-of-way for the pipe line.

It was indicated that whatever the decision may be tomorrow it will be appealed.

South Carolina And Maryland End Truck War

Two Trips a Week Allowed to Vehicles Over Each Highway System.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 15.—Maryland's small scale truck war with South Carolina has been called off, with Maryland the apparent victor, it was learned today.

W. W. Goodman, superintendent of the Public Service Commission of South Carolina, telegraphed to Walter R. Rudy, Maryland commissioner of motor vehicles, outlining the terms under which Maryland trucks could use South Carolina highways.

Goodman's telegram said that Maryland trucks could make one-round trip or two single trips weekly in his State. Rudy wired in return that this was satisfactory to Maryland, and that South Carolina trucks would be given the same privileges in this State.

CCC Youths Set to Restore Fort Frederick, Built in 1755

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 15.—Full restoration of old Fort Frederick, 12 miles west of here, built to protect the early settlers of the Cumberland Valley against attacks by Indians, and the construction of a park surrounding it are included in the program for the next year. The fort is one of the few fortresses built during the French and Indian War that is in a fair state of preservation.

Announcement was made this week that the CCC Camp located there would remain for another year and that landscaping and grading both inside and outside the walls of the fort, built in 1755, would be included in the new program.

An all-Pennsylvania Camp until recently, Maryland boys are now being received, while 100 have been transferred to Westernport, Md., where a new project is to be started. Difficulty in meeting quotas in Maryland has made it impossible to carry out the original intention of having more Maryland boys there.

The CCC youths at Fort Frederick also will be used in constructing caretaker homes both at the fort and at the Washington Monument at Boonsboro, as well as shelters for visitors. Native stone is to be used in the construction.

Riggin Denies Wide Danger Of Paralysis

Health Officer Points to Greater Prevalence Elsewhere.

Albemarle, Richmond Only Seriously Hit, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 15.—Answering statements from parts of Virginia and from other States that there is an "epidemic of infantile paralysis" in the Old Dominion, Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, today declared the prevalence of poliomyelitis is not Statewide, but the largest number of cases is confined to a few areas, such as Albemarle County and Richmond.

Discussing the polio situation elsewhere, Dr. Riggin said

"You don't hear of any 'epidemic' in New York or Massachusetts, yet more cases were reported in those States for the week ended August 10 than in Virginia, according to United States Surgeon General H. S. Cumming."

Epidemics Elsewhere.

The Virginia health official pointed to a map of the State showing only one or two cases were registered in most counties reporting the disease, while many counties in the southwest, the Valley and northern and Tidewater Virginia were entirely free of the malady.

Recording of only nine cases today was additional evidence, Dr. Riggin said, that spread of the disease was subsiding. The reports today were Albemarle, 4; Brunswick, 1; Campbell, 1; Montgomery, 1; Nelson, 1, and Rockbridge, 1.

National Guard Plans.

Meanwhile, National Guard troops that had been barred from Pennsylvania and Maryland because of the paralysis situation in Virginia pressed preparations for training for two weeks beginning Saturday in the Massanutten Mountains and at Virginia Beach. Six hundred artillerymen who will bivouac at Alexandria Saturday night and Front Royal Sunday night will train most of the time around Powell's Fort, in the area history knows as the scene of Gen. Stonewall Jackson's Valley campaign.

On behalf of the Alumni Association of the Virginia Military Academy, John C. Hagan, jr., of Richmond, president, wrote Adjt. Gen. S. Gardner Waller offering the support of the organization in procuring the use of V. M. I. barracks and a nearby training field for the troops.

Gen. Waller replied that he was deeply grateful for the interest shown by the association, but he could not accept the offer because plans had already been made for the training period.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 15.—Gilbert Rice, jr., 13, Negro, of Washington, was drowned in a rock quarry in the eastern part of Harrisonburg this afternoon. The body was not recovered until after three fire engines pumped water out of the 15-foot deep pool.

Work Starts to Give Maryland a Seaport

Operations were brought to a climax when workers of the South Boston Dredging Co. signaled from 700 feet off shore that the channel between Sinepuxent Bay and the Atlantic had been opened.

Work on the inlet was begun in October, 1933. The State provided $500,000 of the needed funds, with the Public Works Administration appropriating the remainder. The total length of the dredged and deepened channel is 13.992 miles.

Lynch Threat Target Is Still Held Far Away

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 15.—Arlie Lewis, Eastern Shore murder suspect, who was rushed from Salisbury, Md., to Baltimore late last night to prevent a possible lynching and lodged in the Baltimore City Jail, will probably be held here until the State's attorney of Wicomico County demands his return for trial, State police officials said today.

Lewis, accused of the murder of Howard Kelly, 35, last Sunday near Powellville, was rushed to Baltimore in an automobile by Lieut. Ruxton Ridgely and two other State troopers after he was whisked from the Salisbury Jail.

Late yesterday, when word reached State police that a crowd had gathered outside the Salisbury Jail, where Lewis was lodged, a squad of several State police was gathered from three points on the Eastern Shore to guard the prisoner, and another squad of ten heavily armed troopers was held in readiness here to be rushed to the Shore if necessary.

North Shore Rail Route Is Approved

Maryland P.U.C. Grants B. & A. R. R. Right to Use W., B.&A. Line.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 15.—Permission to operate the North Shore division of the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad between Baltimore and Annapolis was granted to the new Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad today by the State public service commission.

Authority was given the Peninsula Transit Corporation to operate a local and through bus service between Washington and Annapolis on the Defense highway.

The commission did not act on a petition of the Red Star Bus Line for a franchise for four routes between Baltimore and Annapolis. No indication was given as to when a decision would be given on this petition.

Granting of the franchise to the new Baltimore & Annapolis line means there will be no cessation of service on the North Shore route and at least partial service probably will be maintained over the South Shore division until September 25, and possibly later, Baltimore & Annapolis officials said at a hearing before the commission yesterday.

They said it was impossible to confine the service to the North Shore division on such short notice. At the receiver's sale of the old W. B. & A. propertes a Federal judge had given the backers of the new Baltimore & Annapolis permission to operate over the South Shore track until September 15.

Tigers Rally to Subdue Nats, 6-3; Bridges Hurt by Line Drive

With Shirley Povich

BUCKY HARRIS sat alone in the Washington dugout at Navin Field this afternoon, letting his eyes wander over the scene before game time. The Nats were going through fielding practice, a huge week-day crowd, scenting another pennant for the Tigers, was already in the park. Around the Detroit bench there was great to-do. Admiring fans made their way on the field to stare and gawk at the Tigers. Photographers flittered hither and also thither, snapping Manager Mickey Cochrane in dozens of poses, photographing the players as quickly as they stepped into view.

POVICH.

A penny for Harris' thoughts as he took in the scene would have been wasted money for one who knew the history of Harris and the Detroit club. The plaudits were for Mickey Cochrane and his heroes, but for Bucky Harris it was easy to visualize how another might have been the current idol of Detroit—he himself.

The manager of the seventh-place Washington club, hopelessly lost in the second division, probably swallowed hard as he let his mind's eye rove from the present to the past. Because Harris could see in those ball players who were bringing another pennant to Detroit the self-same ball players that he had chosen, developed and bequeathed to Cochrane when he took leave of the Tigers at the end of the 1933 season to manage the Boston Red Sox in 1934.

Only three of those players who are winning the pennant for Cochrane were not developed by Harris and inherited from him, and one of those is Cochrane himself. The others are Goose Goslin and Al Crowder, whom Cochrane acquired in a pair of sagacious trades. But the others—all of 'em with the possible exception of Charley Gehringer—were Harris' "finds" now making good for Cochrane.

WHEN they said that Hank Greenberg would never make a first baseman, Harris kept him in there, told him he would. The big gawk from the Texas League was a laugh in the infield, a strictly guess hitter when he came to Harris. Amid the cries of "Take him out" by irate Detroit fans when Greenberg was popping up, striking out and generally handicapping the club in the field, Harris was content to play him regularly. But Harris was taking a severe rap from the fans which contributed to his eagerness finally to quit Detroit for Boston.

Imagine the Tigers without Greenberg. And then imagine them without Pete Fox, Jo-Jo White, Marvin Owen, Bill Rogell, Tommy Bridges, Elden Auker and Schoolboy Rowe. All these Cochrane owes to Harris, who plucked them off Detroit farms, inserted them in the line-up, strung along with them through discouraging seasons and finally turned them over to Cochrane in 1934 as a highly polished ball team.

Of Schoolboy Rowe, Harris had said that he would be the greatest right-hander since Walter Johnson, and the baseball men laughed. But those 16 straight wins by Rowe which helped the Tigers to the pennant last year are difficult to laugh off. If Rowe isn't to be mentioned in the same breath with Johnson, then he does surely rate the next best breath.

Even as Harris told Rowe to go in and pitch without a preliminary relief assignment and saw him shut out Chicago, 3 to 0, in his debut in 1933, he told those other lads to consider themselves regulars, play like regulars, and he would take the raps. Under Harris, Rogell blossomed as a star, as did Greenberg; Auker, whose funny delivery was the laugh of the circuit; Owen, who finally learned to hit; Fox and White, who brought speed to the outfield, and Gehringer, a Ty Cobb find, who reached his peak during Harris' reign.

HARRIS' crime at Detroit was that his ball clubs never had a catcher during the five years he was at the helm. They were forced to struggle along with such as Phillips, De Sautelles and Hayworth, and thus it was that Owner Frank Navin was eager to make a trade for Mickey Cochrane when Connie Mack placed him upon the market. Cochrane represented at once a catcher and a manager for the Tigers and when Mack refused the trade until Navin promised to name Cochrane manager, Harris knew he was out at Detroit.

Up in Boston Joe Cronin is also beholden to Bucky Harris. In his one-year regime with the Red Sox, Harris installed two players without whom the Sox would be hopelessly lost. The purchase of Grove from the A's he had little to do with, that being a recommendation of General Manager Eddie Collins, but when Collins was ready to release Third Baseman Bill Werber to the Tigers, Harris interjected a violent "nay." Werber stayed to become the league's best third baseman.

And it was Harris who was primarily responsible for the purchase by the Red Sox of Wes Ferrell. When all other clubs refused to gamble with the temperamental Ferrell and his celebrated sore arm, Harris recommended his purchase for the Red Sox. Since that date there has been no better pitcher in baseball than Ferrell.

Handicapped by lack of funds and scarcity of talent on the Nats' farms, Harris has not been able to exercise his talents in Washington. But his shrewdness in sizing up players, his sagacity in making trades, have not been overlooked. If George Marshall comes into the presidency of the Braves, he'll force Clark Griffith to go high for Harris' services. Marshall wants Harris not as manager, but as general manager, the man who pulls the strings on the talent.

Gallico, Who Dislikes Tenors, Hopes Buddy Will Beat Doyle

By Paul Gallico,

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—There has been an interesting error in matchmaking perpetrated by one of two parties involved in the Jack Doyle-Buddy Baer six-round prize fight scheduled for the Garden Bowl shortly, but whether it was Ancil Hoffman or Walter Friedman remains to be seen.

Hoffman arranges the pairings for Bud Baer, who is Max Baer's big bouncing baby brother, and Friedman has been in charge of certain of Mr. Doyle's aquatic numbers. They are both astute managers, and to date have been very choosey as to the partners selected for their boys.

Each has used his own methods to see that no harm should befall his meal ticket and to date they have been effective. Hoffman uses the indirect method, which is to match his man with someone who won't hurt him very much, and on whom Buddy can practice marksmanship. Friedman favors the direct method. They tell me that Doyle knocked out his first opponent in this country with an incantation, because he certainly didn't hit him.

But behold these two young bucks brought together suddenly and all once more becomes confusion. Because neither one will do business with the other. It isn't so much the ethics of the ring or the high moral plane upon which the sport is conducted that prevents a reasonable understanding between two rival business firms, but there is a natural and deep-seated grudge between the two, and there is nothing that can be done about it but fight it out.

For it seems that Doyle is what is known as an Irish tenor, while Buddy is a barytone, and the natural antipathy between these two ranges too deep seated for compromise. Doyle yodels light, Baer croons dark, and that is all there is to it, and you will never get them together on any kind of a

Haas and Burkemo Reach Golf Final

Defeat Smead and Warren in Western Junior.

By the Associated Press.

Haas accomplished his march to the final by continuing the display of sub-par game he has flashed throughout the meet. He whipped Jerome Barber, Jacksonville, Ill., 4 and 3, in the quarter-finals in the morning and won from Charles Smead, Chicago junior district champion, 5 and 4, in the afternoon.

Haas has lost only 2 of the 53 holes that he has played in his four matches so far in the meet and is a favorite to defeat Burkemo.

Myer's Error On Soft Tap Is Costly

Linke and Hensiek Yield Ten Hits as 9,500 Fans Look On.

By Shirley Povich,

A Staff Correspondent.

DETROIT, Aug. 15.—Washington stopped Tommy Bridges' streak of 23 scoreless innings early in the game today and then started one of its own. The Nats were still engaged in collecting zeros in the last six innings when the Tigers came along and collected the ball game.

Detroit battered down a 3-to-0 deficit that Bridges had incurred during a Washington uprising in the third inning. The final score was 6 to 3, and it wasn't all the fault of Ed Linke and Phil Hensiek, who allowed the Tigers ten hits while Bridges and Elon Hogsett were holding the Nats to seven.

Capt. Buddy Myer inspired a two-run rally by the Tigers in the sixth when he fumbled Goslin's meek grounder and, with the Tigers striving hopefully to break the 3-to-3 deadlock against Hensiek in the eighth inning, they succeeded only with the help of Umpire George Moriarity, who unblushingly called Marvin Owen safe at third base when he was palpably out.

Gehringer's Pinch Hit.

With the winning run thus placed in scoring position, Charley Gehringer was summoned from the dugout, where he has been nursing a sprained knee for three days, and he made good as a pinch-hitter with a brisk single to right that gave the Tigers the winning edge and transported 9,500 Detroit fans with glee.

By their victory, the Tigers maintained their six-game margin over the second-place Yankees who were coincidentally engaged in beating the Indians at Cleveland, 3 to 1.

After their third-inning splurge, the Nats subsided meekly before Bridges and Hogsett, who limited them to three hits in the last six innings.

Linke Starts Rally.

Linke himself launched the rally that interrupted Bridges' streak of scoreless innings when he doubled against the center-field fence in the third. Bridges' throw on Kuhel's sacrifice was late and Linke was safe at third, with Kuhel reaching first. Johnny Stone bounced a double over Owen's head to score 'em both and romped home himself on Myer's single and Manush's infield out.

Linke had a one-hit game in his possession until the sixth. Then he escaped nobly with but a one-run damage. Singles by Owen, Bridges and White drove the first Tiger run home.

Rugged Individualist.

On one hit the Tigers scored two runs to tie the score in the sixth. Myer bobbled Goslin's grounder, Rogell walked and, with two out, Owen doubled against the left center-field fence to drive 'em both home.

Myer Two-Tenths Point From Lead

Post Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, Aug. 15.—Buddy Myer, captain and second baseman of the Washington club, reduced Joe Vosmik's league batting lead to two-tenths of a point today when he made two hits in four times at bat against Detroit pitching while Vosmik was making two hits in five times at bat against New York.

Myer flied to center field in his first appearance at bat against Tommy Bridges today, but he beat out infield hits to Shortstop Bill Rogell in his second and third times at bat. On his final trip to the plate, Greenberg's spectacular stop robbed Myer of a third hit.

Grove Stars; Red Sox Nip White Sox

Cronin, Werber, Cooke Slam Circuit Clouts in 3-1 Triumph.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 15.—Supported by a trio of homers by Manager Joe Cronin, Bill Werber and Dusty Cooke, which accounted for all the Boston runs, Lefty Grove pitched the Red Sox to their third straight victory over the White Sox, 3 to 1, today. Grove scattered seven Chicago hits in hanging up his season's fifteenth victory.

The defeat was the seventh in succession for the slumping White Sox, whose August record now reads 13 losses against 1 tie and a lone victory.

Les Tietje, who pitched six-hit ball, was the victim of the three circuit clouts, each of which was lined into the left field pavilion by a narrow margin. Cronin's and Werber's came in the second inning, Werber's being his thirteenth of the season, while Cooke followed suit in the sixth.

Luke Appling's second single was followed by a double by Al Simmons in the seventh to prevent a shutout.

A's Rally to Win Over Browns, 5-3

Get Triple, Four Singles in 7th Inning Attack.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Aug. 15.—The Philadelphia Athletics knocked Russ Van Atta out of the box with a three-run rally in the seventh inning today and won their third straight victory from the cellar dwelling Browns, 5 to 3.

After the Browns tied the score at 2-all in the sixth, Warstler tripled to open the seventh. Carl Doyle, recently signed North Carolina sandlotter, brought him in with a single. Three more singles by Moses, Cramer and Foxx added two more tallies.

Pitcher Ed Linke was playing an important role in yesterday's game when this Wirephoto was snapped. He is seen scoring on Stone's double following his own two-base clout and he had the Tigers shut out at the moment. However, Linke started missing on his right cylinder later and the game went the way of so many others.

Yankees' Rally In 7th Tops Tribe, 3-1

Pounce on Hudlin After Being Held to 1 Hit for Six Innings.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 15.—The Yankees staged one big rally today after Willis Hudlin had held them to a single hit in the first six innings and did enough scoring to beat the Indians, 3 to 1.

Bill Diskey and Tony Lazzeri opened the seventh inning with singles. Each advanced on Jack Saltgaver's fly and Dickey scored when Pinch Hitter Charley Ruffing grounded out. One baggers by Earle Combs, Red Rolfe and Ben Chapman completed the scoring.

Odom Horses Run Nose Apart at Spa

By the Associated Press.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 15. Some 8,000 spectators were treated to a rare sight here today. George P. Odom's entry of Chancery and Chancing, both by Chance Play out of Courtly and therefore full brothers, finished one, two, noses apart, in the thirty-third running of Catskill Claiming Handicap of 7 furlongs. Chancery, a chestnut 3-year-old gelding, gave 1 pound by the scale to his brother, a chestnut 4-year-old colt. Both were entered for $4,000.

Third money went to William Graham's Open Range, the even-money choice in the field of five smart platers. The Odom entry paid 13 to 5. Chancery earned $2,185, while his brother was entitled to $400 for running second. The time was 1:25 2-5.

This was the first stakes victory for young Odom since his father, George M. Odom, turned some horses over to him last season.

Grant Is Victor Over Menzel In 4 Sets

By the Associated Press.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 15.—A terrific heat wave, generated by Bryan Grant, of Atlanta, ably supported by Mother Nature, today blasted Robust Roderick Menzel, of Czechoslovakia, out of the Newport Casino tennis tournament, 4—6, 6—3, 6—1, 6—3.

Grant devoted the first set, when he made 20 of the 51 errors he piled up in the 35 games, to wearing down Menzel. He forced him to race to the net, dash back to the baseline and bend over for every shot.

Grant Evens Match.

Menzel's huge reservoir of stamina was down to the halfway mark when he clinched the opening set with four brilliant shots from the net. He was reeling when Grant evened the match and during the last two sets he was only able to handle the shots he could reach while standing still.

After torturing the last of the Casino's three foreign entries, Grant moved into the semifinal round against Don Budge, of Oakland, Calif., the red-headed California Davis Cup player, who came from behind to defeat Wilmer Hines, of Columbia, S. C., 6—8, 6—2, 6—0, 6—1.

When Budge steps out against Grant tomorrow, Shields and Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., doubles partners here and at Brookline, Mass., next week, will clash in the top of the draw

Giants Win, 5-4; Toss Costly To Cards

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—The Giants sank the Cardinals deeper into second place today, winning a grim 5-to-4 victory in the third game of the series as the desperate world champions, now trailing by four full games, beat themselves in their anxiety.

Fidgety Phil Collins, third St. Louis heaver, wild-pitched the game away in the seventh, sailing a fast one over Bill Delancey's head to let Travis Jackson, Giant third baseman, trot home with the deciding run. Jackson had forced Mell Ott, who singled to open the inning, and reached third on Gus Mancuso's double, the Giant catcher's third hit of the ball game.

There were only 8,600 in the Polo Grounds, but they saw the best game in the five-game series that opened before 50,000 yesterday, with the two contenders splitting a double-header.

Frisch Struck Out.

It wound up again with the crowd roaring and Frankie Frisch frothing at the plate as Umpire Bill Stewart called him out on strikes for the final out in the ninth with the tying run, represented by Jack Rothrock, resting helplessly on second base.

Bud Parmelee started for the Giants and Bill Walker for the Cards, but neither finished.

Parmelee was replaced by Lefty Al Smith in the eighth after Joe Medwick, who led the Cardinal attack with three hits, doubled and scored on Jim Collins' single with none out. A beautiful double play, the second started by Dick Bartell at critical moments, pulled Smith out of trouble after he fanned pinch hitter Terry Moore.

Southwest Market Nips Brewers, 4-3, for Second-Half Title

McAboy Stars In 'Crucial' Contest

Brown Pounded Hard; Another Series Will Open Tuesday.

AN invincible and inspired Southwest Market nine yesterday defeated the favored Heurich Brewers, 4 to 3, to win the second half of The Post Association's Industrial League race.

Tossing aside their inferiority complex that practically gave the Brewers an 8-to-2 victory Tuesday, the Marketers yesterday overcame the Industrial League's best hurler, Reggie (Lefty) Brown, and played with a zip and ferocity in the field that completely overshadowed the "stale" beer club's gardening.

Ten lusty hits were garnered off Brown's offerings. It was Lyman McAboy, who in the winter bangs fists for Maryland University's ring team, who starred for the Marketers.

Single in Tying Run.

With two men on in the eighth and the score 2 to 1 against his mates, McAboy lined a single between first and second, scoring one and putting another in position to score.

For three innings neither team was able to get a hit. But in the fourth the Brewers got to Carl Wahler for two hits, one a home run by Huck Stahl, which scored George Oertel. The Marketmen registered one in the fifth and didn't even threaten again until the eighth, when Brown eased up momentarily.

Dick Porter, who pitched Wednesday's victory for the Marketmen, was called in to stop the Brewers with two out in the eighth.

Run Cut Off At Plate.

One was in and Chuck Chaconas was on third. Ed Radtke hit a sharp grounder to McAboy at third and the Maryland University star gobbled it up and pegged to the plate, cutting off what would have been Heurichs' tying run.

Another three-game series between the winner of the first and second halves will begin Tuesday. This will bring the Brewers and Marketers together for the sixth "crucial" game in less than two weeks.

removed him. Goslin got a long single against the right field fence on which Cochrane and Greenberg could advance only one base and then with the bases full Hensiek struck out Rogell and disposed of Fox on a fly to Manush.

Hensiek had both the Tigers and Umpire Moriarty to contend with in the eighth and lost the ball game. Owen started the inning with his third hit, a double, but when Hayworth laid down a bunt, Hensiek threw to Travis at third and Owen was apparently out. But Moriarty, a rugged individualist, called him safe. It was at this point that Gehringer was called in to pinch hit and bingled to right to score Owen. Greenberg's double, which figured in two additional runs, was entirely superfluous.

Navy's Grid Stars Leave for Homes

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 15.—Just returned from a three-months' cruise, 63 midshipmen, veterans of one or more years on the gridiron, left Annapolis tonight on their annual leave to visit homes throughout the Nation. This group, made up of first and second classmen, was joined here by a score of second classmen who had been undergoing special instructions here during the summer. All will return to Annapolis by September 5, when regular football practice will open.

While the veterans are on vacation, Lieut. Thomas J. Hamilton, head coach, and his staff of assistants, will work with the squad of 200 Plebes who answered the call for initial practice yesterday. Lieut. Howard H. Caldwell has been designated head coach of the freshman squad.

During the cruise the veterans indulged in some light work on shipboard, and also had opportunity for practice sessions ashore at several ports touched by the squadron. Louis B. Robertshaw, of Wisconsin, center, will lead the Middy gridders during the coming season. There also are seven other letter men in the host of material from which the 1935 eleven will be formed.

Miss Houghton Will Vie in U. S. Golf

Paired With Mrs. Homan for National Tourney at Minneapolis.

MISS Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase Club, daughter of the former Ambassador to Great Britain and Germany, will be the District of Columbia's lone challenger for the Women's National golf championship at the Interlachen Country Club, near Minneapolis, according to the pairings and starting times released last night by the United States Golf Association.

The championship, which will go undefended due to the retirement from competitive golf recently of Virginia Van Wie, three-time winner, will be played the week of August 26 over the same course Bobby Jones won his fourth National Open crown to complete his golfing "grand slam."

Runner-Up for Title.

Miss Houghton, winner of The Washington Post match play handicap tournament, was runner-up to Miss Winifred Faunce, of Manor, in the District championship at Indian Spring. She has been paired with Mrs. Rudolph Homan, of Cincinnati at 12:35.

Miss Lily Harper, of Norfolk, 18-year-old Virginia champion, runner-up in the Middle Atlantic last season, also is entered in the national championship. She has been paired with Mrs. Marjorie Letts, Chicago topnotcher, at 11:35.

Ninety-four women will compete in the championship. Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, three-time champion, is paired with Miss Lucile Robinson, of Des Moines.

Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, Maryland champion, had planned to play in the championship, as had Mrs. Jack Scott, of Congressional, but they did not like the idea of the long trip to Minnesota. Instead they have decided to enter the Mason-Dixon championship scheduled September 3-7 at White Sulphur, W. Va. Miss Houghton and Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, of Chevy Chase, and Miss Helen Dettweiler, of Congressional, and several other Washington women golfers will play in the Mason-Dixon event.

Protest on Dove Season Is Slated

Virginia to Join Parley in Washington Today.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 15 (AP).—Chairman Carl H. Nolting and Executive Secretary M. D. Hart of the State commission on game and inland fisheries will join Delaware Representatives in Washington tomorrow for a protest to J. N. Darling, chief of the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey, on recent regulations prescribing changes in the open season on doves.

The two States, as well as Maryland, oppose changing the season from September 1-December 15 to October 1-January 15.

Hart said he would point out at the conference the effect of the time limit for hunting migratory birds on shooting sora, the success of which is influenced by the time of high tide. The prescribed time limit now is from 7 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Hart also pointed out that under Virginia law hunters must purchase a Federal migratory bird stamp before they can shoot doves, as well as ducks, geese and other migratory birds.

Georgetown's Girls Victors In Meet

GEORGETOWN PLAYGROUND girls captured the Western Conference track meet yesterday at Western High Stadium with little difficulty. The West Enders scored 68 points, while the nearest competitor, Key, tallied 18. More than 400 girls took part, the largest of the girls' conferences.

Anna K. Liesus, Georgetown Playground swim and track star, again jumped into the limelight by breaking her own record in the basket ball throw for distance. Yesterday she tossed it 102 feet, establishing a mark for the lassies to shoot at on August 29 when the city's finals will be held.

Today girls from the Eastern Conference will vie for honors. Thirteen teams will take part in the Eastern meet. With such teams as Sherwood, last year's city champion; Rosedale, four times city champion; Wheatley, having a greatly improved team over previous years, and other contenders showing marked improvement, it is difficult to predict a winner.

Weavers Defeated By Harrisonburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 15.—Harrisonburg and the Albemarle Weavers, new entry in the Valley League, played only four and a half innings before being halted by rain last night, but Harrisonburg had compiled a 12-to-1 score.

This was the first night game to be stopped by rain and the shower came as welcome relief to the sweltering players and fans.

Harrisonburg tallied nine times on only four hits in the third inning, the wildness of Breeden, the Weavers' starting hurler, contributing to the run total.

Warneke Pitches Cubs to 11-3 Win

Dodgers Beaten as Lon Wins Thirteenth.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, Aug. 15.—While Lonnie Warneke pitched a steady game for his thirteenth victory of the season, the Cubs battered out an 11-to-3 victory over the Dodgers today. The triumph gave the Cubs a half-game edge over the defeated St. Louis Cardinals, although the percentage figures kept them in third place by 2 points. Chicago, having played more games, had the lower average.

Tom Zachary was the victim of an eight-run assault in the first two innings, started by Frank Demaree's triple with the bases full and completed by Tuck Stainback's homer with two aboard.

friendly basis. I have already suggested to Mr. Johnston, who arranged this show, that if he really wants to see a fight, all he has to do is put a microphone in the center of the ring, and let them go for it at the bell.

Mr. Johnston has refused to do this on the grounds that the resulting struggle would be too gory, too brutal and too revolting for even the hardened stomachs of this latter day civilization. Once the two men realized that it was an open microphone, nothing but death would stop the struggle.

I have not heard Mr. Doyle warble, but have already written about young Baer's vocal abilities. I am afraid that in this forthcoming bout my sympathies will be entirely with Buddy on the grounds that any man who is engaged in the business of trying to destroy or injure a tenor, should be aided and encouraged.

I hope that during his rehearsal and practice periods at Speculator that young Mr. Baer is making a special feature of using the tonsils of his sparring mates for a target. A left hook to Doyle's chin probably will win Baer the fight, but a right cross to his larynx will earn him the undying gratitude of his people.

Keswick Men Show Horses Tomorrow

TWO Virginia exhibitors who have been enjoying remarkable success at recent shows in the Old Dominion will seek further laurels in the Riding and Hunt Club's meet to be held at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club, in Chevy Chase, Md., tomorrow afternoon.

They are James N. Andrews, University of Virginia undergraduate, and W. B. Bogert, both of whom hail from Keswick. Andrews has formed one of the strongest show stables in Virginia, while Bogert has an outstanding performer in Gay Cockade.

Andrews won the championship at the Riding and Hunt Club's July show with Kippema and took the blue in two open jumping classes with Magic Maid.

Gay Cockade, a bay mare trained and ridden by Bobby Roby, of Washington, won the open jumping title at the Orange (Va.) show and the show championship at Basset, Va., last week, while two weeks ago he took the blue in three jumping classes at Westminster, Md.

Exhibitors new to Capital circles, Maj. Charles B. Lyman, of Washington, and his wife, will show Mavi Maid and Little John in eight classes.

Leading Culpeper Team Wins Again

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., Aug. 15.—Culpeper Athletic Club this afternoon defeated the Charlottesville Athletics in their last appearance here this season by the score of 6 to 3. This was the eighth straight win for the local club, which is now leading the Valley League by a good margin, with few remaining games to play. Herb Hash was on the mound for Culpeper, struck out the first three men to face him, and nine in the game.

The home run by Haslup in the seventh was a fluke affair, the ball rolling into high grass near the park fence, two runners scoring ahead. Culpeper batters obtained six doubles off the combined offerings of Kerr and Warner.

Collegiate Rules For Star Grid Tilt

Originator of Contest at Chicago Settles Issue.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—The collegiate code of rules will be used in the All-Star-Chicago Bear football game at Soldiers Field, August 29.

With coaches of both sides holding out for their own rules, Arch Ward, sports editor of the Chicago Tribune and originator of the game, made the decision that college rules be used. Thus, all forward passes must be made at least 5 yards behind the line of scrimmage.

Explaining his decision, Ward said that while he realized the Bears' offense would be handicapped by the imposition of the college forward pass rule, the All-Stars, chosen by more than 3,000,000 fans, would be at even a greater disadvantage under the pro rule.

Edinburg Tops Mt. Jackson In Twelfth

Lindamood's Homer With Mate on Base Nets 5-to-3 Victory.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

WOODSTOCK, Va., Aug. 15.—Lindamood's home run in the twelfth inning, with Dinges on base, defeated Mount Jackson for Edinburg in a fast and exciting game in the Shenandoah County League today, 5 to 3. St. Clair, ace Edinburg twirler, allowed but three hits and fanned 12 Mount Jackson batters.

Two of the Mount Jackson runs came in the first inning, following errors by Hottle and Swann. Jim Shannon, ace of the Mount Jackson pitching staff, was hit hard by Edinburg.

The game was marked by a long-drawn-out argument in the fifth inning, when Umpire Hite called a blocked ball and when Downey went home, claiming that the official told him he could score. It finally developed that Downey was sent back to third base after both teams crowded around the umpire and argued for about 15 minutes.

Gets Four Blows.

Dinges, with four hits in six attempts, and Downey, with three, led the hitting attack for Edinburg, while Shannon, with two of the three hits allowed by St. Clair, was the leading stickman for Mount Jackson.

As a result of the game today Woodstock is tied again with Mount Jackson for second place in the Shenandoah County loop, trailing Strasburg by two full games.

Red Ensign Takes Lead in Stretch to Win at Narragansett

$5.40 Choice Is Victor by Length

Jubilargo Runs Second; Daily Double Returns $38.20 Mutuel.

By the Associated Press.

NARRAGANSETT PARK, R. I., Aug. 15.—After running easily off the pace set by Mrs. J. R. Gregory's Easiest Way and J. U. Gratton's Jubilargo through 7 furlongs of the mile and 70 yards of the North Attleboro Purse, Percy Pike's Red Ensign forged to the front in the home stretch to win by a length here this afternoon.

When the field of six broke from the gate, Easiest Way sailed down the rail and Jubilargo tore down from the outside. In front of the clubhouse they came out on top, with Red Ensign and Leo J. Mark's Myponne next in contention.

Around the first turn and down the back stretch Easiest Way and Jubilargo raced neck and neck. Myponne tried to move ahead of Red Ensign, but the chestnut gelding shook off the challenge and Jockey Frankie Mauro rated his mount along easily with an eye on the leaders.

Takes Lead in Stretch.

Rounding into the home stretch Red Ensign came to the outside and sailed past the two leaders. Easiest Way lost his chance when he bore in and scraped along the rail, finishing a length back of Jubilargo.

Red Ensign was the favorite and paid $5.40, $2.80 and $2.40, the first public choice to win in the first five races.

On the Air Today

The first three places on the proposed Board of Review, to be set up as a continuing body of critics if sufficient interest develops, go to Zella Boteler, 6805 Forty-sixth street, Chevy Chase, Md.; Margaret Simrall, 2229 Bancroft place, northwest, and Willa L. Barber, 3751 Northampton street northwest.

The letter each wrote has been read with no little interest. If others who "apply" for membership in our little group reflect the same sincere and genuine interest in radio, the plan should prove productive indeed.

Incidentally, where are the men who have so vociferously attacked the present array of programs? Certainly we should have a representation of male listeners, too, on the board.

* * * *

In case the plan is not clear to you, a proposal was made in this column Tuesday to set up a "board of review" composed of listeners, perhaps 20, who would provide reports on air programs with particular attention, I hope, on new shows as they come on the air.

The board, alas, would serve without compensation, but the volunteers who serve have the opportunity to contribute constructive criticism of value to all. If you are one who visualizes improvements and senses the weaknesses in broadcasting, you are eligible for and welcome to the board's membership.

In order that the board's collective (and for that matter individual) conclusions may receive due notice, The Post's Sunday radio page will be open for weekly or monthly reports. If you are interested, address the Radio Editor, The Washington Post.

Three new fall programs are announced. Gabriel Heatter, author, will begin a week-end news commentary for N. B. C. September 21. The time is Saturday afternoons at 4:45. Ralph Kirbery, the Dream Singer, begins a twice-weekly series for N. B. C. August 27, Tuesdays and Fridays, 9:05 a. m. Lawrence Tibbett will be starred in a C. B. S. network show beginning September 24.

Some changes are being made in Jack Benny's show for this fall. The date of the opening has not been set, but advance reports advise that Frank Parker will not be a member of the Benny crew nor will Don Bestor and his orchestra. Substituting for Parker will be Michael Bartlett, borrowed from the screen, and Johnny Green and his orchestra, borrowed, it would seem, from CBS. Bartlett is Grace Moore's selection for her leading man in the flickers. The signing of these two artists will not alter the pattern of the Benny comedy. Each will perform orally as well as musically as Benny stooges.

"Every Night," which opens today at the Fox, should amuse radio listeners, for it is the story of radio's amateur hours. Radio contributes Frances Langford and the Three Radio Rogues and the cinema's leads are George Raft and Alice Faye. The story is based on the adventures of three girls and a man and their rise to radio heights. On the stage, radio provides Sid Gary as a headliner.

Bootlegger Is Handed 360 Days, $500 Fine

An accused bootlegger was arraigned in Police Court yesterday and accorded one of the heaviest sentences for liquor law violations since repeal.

He gave his name as James L. Williams. Charges against him included sale of liquor without a license and possession of liquor for sale. He was arrested by vice squad police.

Judge Isaac R. Hitt sentenced him to serve 360 days in jail on the sale count and to pay a $500 fine or serve an additional 180 days on the possession charge.

"Out Fishin'" ∫ ∫

By Jack Hawley.

ONE of the most sensible things we've heard of for some time is the proposal of Dr. Ernest Gruening, director, division of territories and island possessions, to promote the sport fishing possibilities of Puerto Rico and Virgin Islands. With all kinds of game fishing available and with fast airplane travel this should afford large revenue for the island possessions.

Especially will this be true when the fact becomes generally known that some of the most sought-after big game fishes winter off these lands. Among these are the silver king or tarpon.

Shortly after the acquisition of Puerto Rico the Bureau of Fisheries sent an expedition in charge of Prof. Barton W. Evesviaun to Puerto Rico and made a very excellent and exhaustive report which is out of print. Dr. Gruening is considering an up-to-date survey, more from the sports and revenue angles. We hope it is carried out. That would round out the year for the roving fisherfolk, and with reasonable investment and backing the Government should reduce the red side of the ledger.

Losing Bluefish.

Several local anglers have asked the writer why they are losing so many large bluefish after apparently being securely hooked. That's a tough one to answer unless on the boat at the time of action. However, it is safe to say that several important factors enter into the retrieving of large fish.

First, heavy tackle tells more on the angler than on the fish—it is foolish and altogether needless. Fast-swimming fish will occasionally break a line by friction alone. Knowledge of the fishes actions, too, are most important. The angler must be able to tell from the feel of the rod exactly what the fish is doing. He should know when to exert power, and when to relax. There is little to be gained in working a fish hard when it is taking out line, for the small amount of pressure exerted by the rod will not stop him. When he turns toward the boat, however, the angler must be instantly aware of the maneuver, it is then his turn to gain line.

A good-size fish will not be led in until he wants to be or until he is so weakened by frequent runs that he can not resist and you can save much strength by knowledge of this fact. Your line tires the fish more than the rod in the early part of the fight, and line soon gained is soon lost.

Keep Line Taut.

Another error in fighting fish is that the line must be kept taut. When a bluefish of large size is jumping toward the boat and angler at speed, this is impossible. Of course, the angler must reel fast, but it is almost impossible to keep up with the fish. The line will belly or loop behind the fish and thus keep the pull from behind him, unless the fish is very close to the boat and the line itself comes out of the water for its total length. With the line pulling from behind, as generally is the case, a fish is much less likely to be lost since the hook will not be readily pulled from the open mouth.

It must be realized that no matter how much strain is exerted upon a moving fish the line will never go directly to him. Rather, it will bow or belly out behind, forming a cushion against jerks. This is as it should be, since this bow in the line forms a friction through the water against the fish and greatly helps in your efforts to wear him out. It is always advisable to stop the boat when the fish is securely hooked as it adds to the fairness of the game, giving both angler and fish an opportunity to outguess and outfight each other. Knowledge of tackle and its handling can be gained only through practice, but the angler should strive for form in fishing.

Reports Good.

Reports from the bay are exceptionally good and not all the big blues are at S. W. Middles, by any means. Reports from as far up the bay as Galesville indicate that 6-pounders have been landed during the past two days. Herring Bay seems to be regaining its old-time form. Trout and croakers are still in their daytime slumber, with the best time to get them during the early hours of the morning and late in the evening. This holds good everywhere, especially on bright sunny days. Cornfield Harbor (near Point Lookout), has been the rendevous of some large trout and the writer wonders why so few take advantage of such delightful fishing grounds. Farther up the bay reports are picking up in favor of the angler, with Piney Point, Tall Timbers, Solomons Island, Kenwood Beach and other resorts reporting good catches other than during the hours of 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Alleged Gang Chief Draws Fine of $200

An alleged gang leader, accused of aiding "15 or 20 men" to wreck a restaurant in the 2100 block of Pennsylvania avenue northwest several weeks ago, was sentenced to pay a fine of $200 or serve 180 days in jail when arraigned before Judge Robert Mattingly in Police Court yesterday.

According to testimony, Redding engaged in an argument with a man in the restaurant; finally left and returned with a gang of men. The gang, it was testified, then "wrecked the place" by throwing bottles, beer mugs, iron pipes, chairs and sugar bowls. Rucker was struck on the head with a bottle and suffered a fractured skull, the court was told.

Wanderbirds Scheduled to Visit Fish Hatchery, Historic Sites

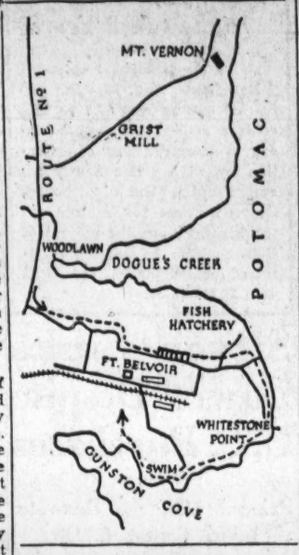
By Robert Shosteck.

The Wanderbirds Hiking Club on Sunday will make a pilgrimage to several historic points in nearby Fairfax County, visiting Mount Vernon, Woodlawn, Fort Belvoir, and the ruins of the old Lord Fairfax mansion. In addition, the hikers will inspect the fish hatchery at the Bureau of Fisheries station near Whitestone Point, and swim in Gunston Cove. The group will hike the three miles between the hatchery and Gunston Cove.

Club members, and readers of The Washington Post who would like to spend an eventful day away from town will meet at 9:45 a. m. in front of The Post Building. The group will go by bus along the Mount Vernon boulevard to Fort Belvoir. Reservations must be made in advance at National 4200 and the fare will be 70 cents. Tickets may be bought in advance at The Post Building. Names should be left with The Post switchboard operator, since seats will be reserved only for those phoning in.

Not far from the gates of Fort Belvoir the camp guard will point out the ruins of Lord Fairfax's mansion and the grave stone upon which is inscribed "Here Lies Lord Fairfax." We also pass the ruins of Fort Belvoir and the barracks of the Regular Army regiments quartered here. Leaving the buses, the hikers will follow the road to the fisheries station on the Potomac.



Leaving the hatchery, we follow the shore of the Potomac to Gunston Cove, to the beach which has been set aside for the hikers through the courtesy of Col. Matheson, fort commandant.

About 3 o'clock the Wanderbirds will again board buses for the return trip. Our first stop will be at Woodlawn, the home of Nellie Custis located near Dogues Creek. The buses turn into the Mount Vernon boulevard and stop at an old colonial grist mill, now partly ruined. We continue on to Mount Vernon. The hikers will have an opportunity to roam about the estate until closing time at 4:30. The admission charge is 25 cents. The group should return to The Post Building by 6 p. m., with plenty of time left for dinner and the concert.

Suggested trips for September and October Wanderbird tours will be much appreciated. We are interested in learning which trips you want repeated and what new trips members wish to propose. Send your recommendations in this week or next, accompanied by a sketch map if possible. Remember, we are interested in hikes, not bus trips.

Tide Table for the Week

Note—The predictions given here represent the time of high and low water at shore at the various places specified, not necessarily the time of current changes. In Chesapeake Bay, midchannel, between Chesapeake Beach and Annapolis, slack water occurs about 2½ hours to 4½ hours after high and low water at shore. At other points (except Wachapreague Inlet) the change of current occurs from ½ hour to 1½ hours after high and low water.

Reserve Funds Up 139 Million In Past Week

Member Balances Are 2.67 Billions Over Legal Need.

By the Associated Press.

The weekly report of Federal Reserve banks yesterday disclosed the sharpest upturn in months in member bank balances—$139,000,000—for the period ended August 14. The figure brought the total to $5,254,000,000, about $2,670,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

The upturn was brought about through a transfer of Treasury cash and deposits with the Reserve banks, aided by a continued gold inflow which amounted to $26,000,000 for the week.

The condition statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended August 14, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,476,000,000, unchanged from the preceding week and $10,000,000 above the corresponding week in 1934.

"On August 14 total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,477,000,000, an increase of $1,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $139,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $8,000,000 in money in circulation and a decrease of $40,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency, offset in part by a decrease of $157,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks and $4,000,000 in non-member deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts, and an increase of $26,000,000 in monetary gold stock. Member bank reserve balances on August 14 were estimated to be approximately $2,670,000,000 in excess of legal requirements."

Corn Advances On Crop Damage

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Increasing severity of corn crop damage reports, together with augmented shipping demand for corn, did much to lift prices of all grains today.

Kansas official advices telling of effects of extreme high temperatures and lack of moistures said that in the eastern half of the State 50 to 75 per cent of the corn crop has been damaged beyond the point where it can produce even a fair output. In the western half of the State the damage is still more grave. Special significance, too, was attached to word that cornfields in southwest Iowa showed distressing conditions.

Corn closed nervous, ⅜ to 1⅝ above yesterday's finish; December, 57 to 57⅛; wheat, ⅝ to 1 cent up; December, 89½ to 89¾; oats, unchanged to ¼ higher, and provisions at a rise of 17 to 50 cents.

Raw Silk Futures Highest in 2 Years

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 15.—The rise in raw silk futures of 7 to 10½ cents a pound was ascribed today to sharply higher consumption by mills. The September option sold at $1.66 a half pound. Current prices for futures are the highest since the middle of October, 1933. In July mills consumed 44,166 bales, compared with 30,000 in June.

Silver Sinks Lower Despite U. S. Purchases

Price Is Off ⅜ Here to 65⅜ Cents; 65.09 in London.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 15.—Despite heavy buying by the United States Treasury in the London market, the world price of silver continued to decline today, although at a slower pace than yesterday.

Imported silver for commercial use at New York declined ⅜ of a cent to 65⅜ cents an ounce, a new low since April 10. After holding unchanged at 67¾ cents the price has dropped in the past three days by 2⅜ cents. Today's dip in New York followed a further decline of 3-16 of a penny to a price of 29 pence in London.

New York silver circles attributed the decline to further liquidation of over-extended speculative accounts in the British and Far Eastern markets, where speculators rushed into the market during April in the belief that United States Treasury was engaged in rapidly bidding the world price up to the statutory American price of $1.29 an ounce.

It was pointed out that during the April advance, the price reached a peak of 81 cents, and that presumably some speculators who bought around the top price were finding that their margin was running thin and were, perhaps, being pressed by London banks.

High Hog Prices Travel Westward

Kansas City, Aug. 15 (AP).—For the first time since July, 1929, hogs sold at $12 even. The market on ket today. Early sales to shippers and traders at $11.85 to $12 were 10 to 15 cents higher than yesterday.

Omaha, Nebr., Aug. 15 (AP).—Hogs hit the $12 mark on the Omaha Live Stock Market today for the first time since September 22, 1928. One lot of choice 160-240 pound weights sold at $12 even.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Motor, Oil and Mining Shares Keep Stocks From Decline in Less Active Trading; Government Bonds and Dollars Weaken.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Aug. 15.—Financial markets followed no regular course, but on balance made some headway. Commodities were steady to strong in most departments. Cotton was treated with more consideration and wheat rose nearly a cent. September options closed up ⅞ higher at 81½ cents a bushel, the lower harvests making up for the outlook next year of a larger acreage. Minor commodities hardened a little. Stocks closed with fractional advances in the majority, on a turnover of around one and a half billion shares. Last prices were near the best.

Bonds were draggy, activity being centered in Government issues. News of the bids received on the additional long-term 2⅞ per cents had the effect of weakening the price, as anticipated. Plainly the market is not eager to take more long-term Government issues. Moreover, the news that the Government is hitting up a faster pace in its spending program is doing nothing to support either Government bonds or dollars. With the deficit for the first month or so of the fiscal year nearly twice as great as last year, the prospect is none too bright, especially with new measures coming up for administration involving the further huge expenditure of money.

Stocks were inclined to settle back, but in the afternoon trading the activity in motors and oils renewed bullish interest. Public utility drives were not continued, and the railroads were less active. In the motor group Studebaker was the feature, rising above 4 in large sales. Auburn also was given a boost. Some of the industrials were given trials of strength under cover of those group movements.

Mining shares found their reception a little warmer. Silvers were firmer with news of Treasury support for the metal and coppers held firm. Kennecott, which declared only the usual dividend, stepped up to a new high price for the year. Consolidated Oil was a favorite for a time on its improved earnings report. Steel was barely steady.

Buying Silver.

Dollars continued under pressure abroad, and since the sale of dollars yesterday for a record-breaking silver purchase, 25,000,000 ounces, was continued today, a partial explanation at least is at hand. This is the season when sterling ordinarily declines with British purchase of American raw materials, and the gold currencies are not yet so securely fastened as to warrant a determined advance against dollars.

Modern foreign trade financing mechanism is such as to reduce seasonal fluctuations of any currency, but for sterling to appreciate with the gold currencies for three days running is at least out of the ordinary. It matters little whether the stabilization fund buys sterling or francs, converting francs into pounds. Either way the effect is to boost the pound in relation to gold.

Francs reached the highest price in many weeks. The statement of the Bank of France for last week, issued yesterday because of today's holiday, showed a small loss in gold probably to London and no doubt connected with recent movements of Italian gold. Bank of England today showed a moderate rise in gold holdings and a decline in currency circulation, the deflation of the bank holiday expansion.

Politics.

Money markets were calm and unchanged. Demand for new credit continues slack, notwithstanding the unseasonal activity in business and the advance of the season for increased use of funds. A good deal of business is being done in such commercial paper as is available. Dealers report that 95 per cent of it is now marketed on a basis of three-quarters of 1 per cent. Heretofore prime names have been moving at that rate, with good names and less well-known paper at around 1 per cent. Volume of paper available is reported to be increasing, although the latest Federal Reserve Bank summary of outstandings indicated only a moderate increase. Country banks are the principal buyers.

Markets had to worry along without the aid of news stimulants, except in a few spots. The financial district cordially detested the new tax bill, which is nearing its final stages, especially with its provision for a graduated and higher corporation income tax, but markets have had some time to grow alarmed about such matters. With that as well as with other such legislation, actual or proposed, such as the old-age pensions, the coal control bill and the bank bill, hope rises for a new deal in the coming elections.

In no small measure the markets are attempting to discount the turn of the New Deal tide. Meanwhile, if nothing worse happens, business is demonstrating that it can live, on a reduced scale, in spite of the handicaps placed upon it.

Washington Bank Clearings Lead the Nation

Upward Trend in 22 Big Cities Is Slowed While Gain Here Is 32.2%.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Despite a distinctly slower uptrend in national bank clearings during the past week local clearings gained 32.2 per cent over the same 1934 week, the Washington Clearing House Association reported yesterday.

In the seven days prior to Wednesday, $17,247,389 cleared through local banks while during the same period of 1934, $13,117,927 was cleared. Nation-wide reports released yesterday by Dun & Bradstreet showed clearings to be only 7.2 per cent over a year ago.

The total for 22 leading cities of the United States was $4,545,189,000, against $4,239,802,000 a year ago. At every large city with the exception of San Francisco clearings continue in excess of those reported a year ago. The local increase was greater than that of any other reporting city.

Life Insurance Sales.

A jump of 471.8 per cent in group life insurance policies sold during July as compared with the same month of 1934, for the first time since February lifted total sales above the comparable month of last year, the Association of Life Insurance Presidents announced yesterday.

Averaging all life insurance classifications, the gain during the month was 30.2 per cent notwithstanding the total for the first seven months of this year was up only 4.6 per cent.

Reports by 42 companies having in force 83 per cent of the outstanding life insurance in the country are included in the survey. New ordinary insurance dropped 2.7 per cent during the month, while new industrial insurance gained 0.6 per cent.

Large Contracts.

The large increase in group policies was laid to the placing of contracts by several of the largest industrial concerns, including United States Steel.

Total new business of all classes written for July was $904,149,000, an increase of $209,890,000 over the $694,259,000 of policies written during July, 1934.

For the first seven months of this year total new business written amounted to $5,380,670,000, compared with $5,143,946,000 for the corresponding period of a year ago.

Gas Well Brought In Near San Francisco

New York, Aug. 15.—Amerada Petroleum Corporation of California has brought in a gas well in San Joaquin County, Calif., about 50 miles southeast of San Francisco. The well, partly closed in, is reported to be producing at the rate of 35,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily.

The discovery is regarded as important in view of the nearness to San Francisco and the big demand for gas there.

Committee to Rule Foreign Stock Deals

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 15.—The New York Stock Exchange has created a new standing committee to supervise the business of member firms in foreign countries. Trading in the New York market from abroad had increased considerably of late, and there have been reports that market operators might seek to evade Security and Exchange Commission regulations by placing their orders abroad.

Dividends Run A Million a Day For Five Weeks

General Motors at Top of List With Payment of $21,386,000.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 15.—Dividend payments representing a net balance of $35,000,000 have been made to stockholders in 34 selected corporations in the last 35 business days.

The compilation, prepared by the Associated Press statistical department, showed favorable action on the dividend rate by 32 organizations and unfavorable action by two.

Favorable decisions by directors included payments under the headings of extra dividends, increases in the regular rate, resumption of payments after passing one or more dates when dividend action was due, and the payment of an initial dividend.

The total involved in favorable actions, minus the funds affected by unfavorable decisions, was $34,995,710. The two corporations listed as taking unfavorable action omitted their regular payment.

The leader in the list was General Motors Corporation, which declared an extra dividend of 25 cents a common share and increased its regular rate from 25 to 50 cents quarterly. Stockholders received $21,386,000.

23 Unfavorable Actions.

The organizations in the survey were selected from a list of 152 corporations which have taken dividend action in the last 35 business days. In the larger list, 129 actions were favorable and 23 unfavorable.

Wall street financial authorities in discussing recent dividends have noted that some of the payments labeled "extra" have been made regularly in the past. In such cases they refer to them as "the usual extra" dividend. Likewise, some increased dividends have been on that basis in the past.

Such procedure, it is declared, denotes the ability of the corporation to pay stockholders on the basis of current earnings, but also indicates an unwillingness to establish the payments under the term "regular."

The average price of the bonds to be issued is about 100 25-32, and a total premium of $780,275.03 will be received.

Foreign Exchange.

In New York the pound sterling was unchanged at $4.98¼. Earlier, in London, American Treasury silver buying was credited with putting some pressure on the dollar, which was a shade lower at 4.98⅛ to the pound.

The Paris market was closed on account of the Assumption Day holiday, but in New York the French franc held even at 6.64 cents. Swiss francs were also unchanged at 32.77 cents, but guilders advanced .05 of a cent at 67.88 cents.

Two Convicted On Charges of Peddling Dope

Four Others to Be Tried for the Sale of Marihuana.

A major point in the local and Federal drive against sale and possession of marihuana—habit forming drug—was scored in Police Court yesterday when a special District prosecutor obtained convictions against two of six accused peddlers.

Five men and a woman, among 15 persons arrested in recent raids, were arraigned before Judge Isaac R. Hitt. Faced with charges prepared by Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward M. Curran, two of the defendants pleaded guilty and each was sentenced to serve 120 days in jail. Two others pleaded not guilty and requested jury trials. They will appear again in court September 12. Charges against two others were continued until today. Bonds in each case were set at $1,000.

The suspected peddlers were each charged under an act of Congress "to regulate the practice of pharmacy and sale of poisons in the District." The act prohibits the sale of "cannabis indica"—known as marihuana—without the seller determining that the purchaser is aware of its "poisonous nature." It also prohibits the sale of marihuana "by any other than a licensed pharmacist."

Those sentenced to jail in guilty pleas were Robert Fraizer, colored, 25, 900 block of N street northwest, and John Brown, colored, 24, 1600 block of Eighth street northwest. The only white man arraigned, Charles J. Ross, alias Blackie Davis and Smokey Joe, a taxi driver of the 700 block of Thirteenth street northwest, pleaded not guilty and will face trial today.

Defense attorneys announced intentions of attempting to prove at today's trials that the defendants were charged illegally.

Nine other persons arrested in the raids were released yesterday by narcotic squad detectives and Federal agents.

According to Curran, present drug laws are inadequate to govern the sale and possession of marihuana. There is no provision for this type of drug in the Harrison narcotic act, he declared.

FLOOR SAMPLE
PIANOS
Our large fall stocks will be in shortly and we must make room, so we're closing out our floor samples at big reductions. These instruments are in new condition and carry our new guarantee. All are the latest models and most are among the very popular styles. Listed below are a few of the values:

$225—Apartment Upright. Plain mahogany case with a full keyboard. Has a deep, rich tone for its size. A beautiful instrument and an unusual value at $225. One of the most popular apartment models we've ever handled.

$250—Apartment Upright. Walnut case designed in the popular plain style. The mechanism is the same as is in the $325 instrument, but the case is slightly heavier.

$295—Baby Grand. Colonial style case finished in blended mahogany. This instrument has been slightly used, but we don't believe it can be told from new. Very unusual at this low price.

$395—Louis XV Period Model Baby Grand. Finished in a beautiful butt walnut. Regularly priced much higher. Good grands of this type are seldom found at anywhere near this price.

$495—In the better piano class we have a beautiful little Baby Grand, one of the best selling models in our store, that at this price is an unusual value. The case design is the modern, straight line style, the finish mahogany. A really fine instrument.

$495—Here's a Baby Grand that is regularly priced at $795, but it is the last we have of this model; we've cut the price deep to close it out quickly. Very sturdily built in tone qualities and handsome appearance make it an instrument any one would be proud to own. A very popular style, too, plain case finished in a lustrous mahogany.

Courtney Ryley Cooper's '10,000 Public Enemies'

Chapter XXXI—Round-Up of Blood (Part 2)

However, life lingered, and in the hospital, Eddie Green, who had served so faithfully in the cause of criminality, unwittingly reversed his code.

The bullet had crashed through his skull, causing strange perversions of mentality. He believed that he had been injured in an automobile accident and remembered nothing of the gunfire which had cut him down. His fevered eyes transformed the nurse into his wife. He thought that the special agents, who relieved each other at his bedside, were his doctors. His stricken brain told him that he could talk freely.

It was not a correlated recital. There were long lapses into coma, other passages of time in which the man merely babbled. Then suddenly, many days after the shooting, he blurted:

"John—the man to take care of you is Doc May!"

"Doc May?" the special agent asked. "What does he do?"

The wounded man laughed weirdly.

"Sure he got hurt. Some Fed shot him in the leg. Frechette knows all about it—ask her."

"Where is Frechette?"

The fever-glazed eyes rolled; the gasping, dry lips opened and closed. At last:

"With John. At Doc May's."

"Where does Doc live?"

He couldn't remember. Out went a note from the special agents for other officers to check up on the address of a Dr. May with a reputation of shady medical practice. The long hours passed, day after day. Coma would come and go, babbling follow—then a burst of information which named the gang, or gave the address where Bess, his wife, could be found, or told of the bank robberies which Dillinger had perpetrated. Slowly the periods of speech grew shorter; at last there was only coma. Then Eddie Green died. He had served many masters, from Frank Nash to John Dillinger, and dying, had served the law for the first time.

Dillinger was gone by the time they found Dr. Clayton E. May and sent him to prison for two years. He had hidden Dillinger for several days. Soon they caught Evelyn Frechette in Chicago and sent her to prison for two years, aided in their case by the information given by Eddie Green.

Then came the raid at the Little Bohemia resort 50 miles north of Rhinelander, Wis., where barking dogs heralded the approach of special agents and allowed Dillinger to escape. It was during this raid that Baby Face Nelson, true to his custom, did some cowardly shooting and killed W. Carter Baum of the Bureau of Investigation. The information given by Eddie Green, however, allowed special agents once they had checked his information, and found that a number of persons named by him had been with Dillinger, to bring about the arrest of Mrs. Crompton, Marie Conforti, Opal Long, who was Russell Clark's wife; Bessie Skinner and finally Pat Reilly.

Ghastly, shaking, Pat Reilly at last learned the penalty of greatness. He confessed everything. Again special agents had gained new leads. Indirectly, the information centered the search around Chicago, where, through the invaluable aid of Capt. Timothy O'Neill and Sergt. Martin Zarkovitch, members of the East Chicago, Ind., police force, Dillinger was tracked down and killed. A month later Homer Van Meter fell before police guns in St. Paul. There is an underworld rumor that John Hamilton is also dead and that he was buried by the gang near the mouth of a coal mine in Wisconsin. Tommy Carroll had been killed in June by police officers in Waterloo, Iowa. All the gang were now dead except its worst killer, Baby Face Nelson still lived. Meanwhile Pat Reilly, the petty booze handler who got to know the big shots, serves out a sentence of a year and 9 months in a Federal penitentiary. In all his rise to the big time, he never had thought of that.

Husband Slayer To Plead Insanity

Former Show Girl Insists Shooting Was Accident.

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Lucille Horan, former show girl, will plead "self-defense, justifiable homicide and temporary insanity" at her trial for the killing of her husband, Frank Horan, her attorney announced this afternoon.

The lawyer, Samuel Fleischmann, said "while the girl can't give a very clear account of what happened after they got home yesterday morning, this much is clear: Her husband, who was drunk and had been beating her, came out of the house with a pistol, they struggled for it, it was discharged and he fell mortally wounded. She says she did not mean to kill him, and keeps insisting 'he was the nicest man in the world.'"

The only appearance today of Mrs. Horan, who says she is a former Vanities dancer, was a brief trip to Lackawanna to view the body of her husband.

Neighbors heard loud cries while she was in the house of a sister-in-law and then she was rushed back to jail, "in bad shape," Fleischmann said.

Father McCauley Georgetown Dean

Dr. Morgan's Successor at School of Medicine.

The Rev. David V. McCauley, S. J., regent during the last year of Georgetown University's medical and dental schools, yesterday was appointed dean of the university's school of medicine by President Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J.

Dr. McCauley's appointment leaves only one vacancy in the office of dean. A successor of the late Dr. William F. Notz, for many years head of the foreign service school, will be filled before the new term opens.

The new dean of the school of medicine succeeds Dr. William Gerry Morgan, who resigned. Father McCauley entered the Jesuit order in 1915, was ordained to the priesthood in 1927 by the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, archbishop of the Baltimore diocese, taught biology at Fordham, Holy Cross and Canisius College, and then was assigned to the Jesuit Pontifical University at Woodstock, Md., as professor of biology and experimental psychology. He joined the Georgetown faculty in 1933. As dean of the school of medicine he will also continue to be regent of the medical and dental schools.

'Pistol-Toting' Favored By Maverick, of Texas

By the Associated Press.

Despairing at the length of congressional debate, Representative Maverick (Democrat), Texas, said yesterday to friends that sometimes he thought it might be a good thing to permit members of Congress "to tote" pistols on the floor of the House.

"I was in Mexico City once," he said, "when there was a murder in the Mexican Congress."

Discovering America
With Maxine Davis

San Diego, July —I went calling today at Trail's End Auto Camp. The play on words is, I think, unconscious. It's a trailer camp, and one of the most depressing manifestations of the American character I have even seen. I'm writing about it because it's typical of countless such camps I have passed across the continent.

Trail's End Auto Camp is on a vacant lot 300 by 400 feet, facing a public beach. The sun setting golden in an aquamarine and rose-quartz sky colors 149 automobiles, with trailors or tents beside them. The trailors are often labeled with such subtle humor as "Stagger Inn," and the tents are anything from the latest 1934 model to contraptions made of feed sacks. You can see cots either in the open or lined up side by side within with institutional lack of privacy.

"Don't you sort of hate that?" I asked Mr. Phil Haddock, who was smoking a pipe outside one of them and speculating on the price of hogs with a neighbor.

It might be fun for him, but it looked exactly like a congested slum tenement area to me. With all the West to pitch their tents in, 149 families, averaging, I learned, months at a time. Four persons from diaper to doddering ages, were living there. Their wash hung on the lines; their dogs scratched; their children whooped; their menfolk shaved; sometimes their chickens escaped their coops.

Mr. Haddock explained all this to me. He's a dairy farmer from over in Arizona, and it's right hot there this time of year. So he leaves his oldest boy in charge of the farm and ma and Bobby and Ada and Dotty get into the trailor and come here for the summer. It costs $5 a month to stay here, $7 with electricity. You get general toilet facilities, garbage disposal, and beach patrol for that outlay. You cook on a coal-oil stove, and you don't need many clothes.

Every week or so Mr. Haddock drives back home to see that things are going alright. Not much can go wrong. He takes his vacation between planting and harvesting.

Amusements are bathing and fishing. The congestion is such that the beach is constantly cluttered and dirty. Which is strange, because California has a number of miles of beaches.

All the vacationers here aren't farmers. They are mechanics and tradesmen and workingmen of various sorts who have saved money all year for this holiday in California. You meet them on the way. They're always in a hurry. They rush pass scenery of breath-taking grandeur, bobble pass the Painted Desert and the Petrified Forest without a glance, take the curves of magnificent mountain passes in dizzying haste, parade through the lovely miles outside this city wearily, and settle down in this herd in the dreariest, dingiest part of San Diego.

Morgan Baker was discharged from Emergency Hospital yesterday, where he underwent an appendicitis operation last week. He is improving satisfactorily and will return to duty on the Federal Diary before the end of the month.
